

TWO BAD MEN IN CUSTODY

Men Arrested at Junction City, Sunday, Have Burglar Kit on Person—Now in Jail Here.

Our Dancy and Knowlton correspondents give complete and graphic accounts of the hold-ups that took place near those places last Sunday. The two men who were identified as the hold-ups, with the money on their persons, are in jail at Wausau, they having been bound over to the municipal court, which meets in November, under bonds of $1,000 each. They gave their names as Stanley Smith and Peter Gorski, aged about 35 and 20 respectively and gave their testimony at the preliminary examination through an interpreter, claiming to be unable to speak English.

The other two men were brought here from Wausau, yesterday, by Deputy Sheriff Culver and Constable A. L. Voyer, of Junction City, and were arraigned before Judge Murat, charged with carrying burglar tools. Both entered pleas of not guilty, their examination being set for the 22d inst. Not having the sum of $1,000 each on their persons, they were remanded to jail. They gave their names as John Goltz, aged 26, and Russell McDuff, aged 18. The Junction City officers believe in the arrest of these two men they forestalled the robbery of the new bank at that place, as they carried a complete kit of tools, consisting of drills, chisels, and shells that are supposed to be loaded with explosives. They reached Junction City from the north Sunday afternoon, one of them on a freight train and the other on foot, he having been put off at Sherry. This latter fact was learned after their arrest on suspicion of being connected with the Knowlton-Dancy hold-ups.

Entertained at Plainfield.

The following members of the Pastime Whist club spent Tuesday at Plainfield, where they were entertained by Mrs. W. B. Angelo, a feature of the entertainment being a 6 o'clock dinner—Messdames B. C. Park, C. von Neupert, R. A. Cook, C. G. Macnish, T. L. McGlachlin, J. M. Bischoff, W. W. Taylor, E. H. Joy, J. W. Dunegan and Miss Anna Park.

A portion of the afternoon was devoted to whist, first prize being won by Mrs. McGlachlin. The ladies also had the pleasure of inspecting the Wauwasha County bank's new building, which they agreed was a beauty and are especially proud of the fact that it was designed by a former Stevens Point boy, W. L. Alban, now of the firm of Alban & Fisher at St. Paul.

NEW DIRECTORS CHOSEN

Wisconsin Valley Agricultural Distilling Co. Formally Organized With Capital of $20,000.

The new organization for the purpose of distilling alcohol from potatoes, heretofore spoken of in these columns, and which will be located at Custer, has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Wisconsin and will be known as the Wisconsin Valley Agricultural Distilling Co. The capital stock is $20,000, $5,000 of which has been subscribed by residents of Milwaukee, and between $10,000 and $12,000 more has been sold to people of Stockton, Sharon and the city of Stevens Point.

The first meeting of stockholders was held last Saturday evening, at which time the following directors were chosen: J. M. Kluck, Lorenze F. Wagner, Alex Kluck, F. A. Lukaszevich, Peter E. Doyle, Frank Plizka and Jos. Firkus. All are residents of the town of Sharon except Mr. Wagner, who resides in Milwaukee, and Mr. Firkus, whose home is in Stevens Point.

The new plant will be built this fall and will probably be erected a short distance north of Custer station. That it will be a financial success and of much benefit to the community, especially the farmers, there is little doubt, as the potatoes usually used in a distillery are of a small size and not marketable. It is expected that the subscription list will be closed this week, or not later than next Sunday, when a meeting of directors will be held for the purpose of electing officers.

First Normal Number.

The Royal English Hand-Bell Ringers, who appeared at the Opera House last evening as the first number of the Normal Lecture Course, gave splendid satisfaction to the patrons. The Hand-Bell Ringers, as introduced by their manager, Percy J. Burrell of Boston, Mass., are natives of Horbury, England, and represent in that country what the village brass band does in America. The correct chiming of the village church bells require practice by the ringers and in order to get this practice without disturbing the peace and quiet of the villagers, the plan of resorting to hand bells was hit upon. While at first bells of only a few tones were used, now hand-bell ringing has become so widespread that the Royal English Hand-Bell Ringers perform on nearly two hundred melodious bells. This organization are champions in their line and have been prize winners in a number of annual contests. There are eight performers, a conductor and reader in the company, and four of these also compose a quartet of singers. Mr. Burrell, the reader, showed a wide range of ability and interpreted pathetic and humorous pieces in a strikingly natural manner. The solos and choruses, some of them to bell accompaniment, were received with enthusiasm and all had to be repeated to with encore.

Candidate for Councilman.

Harry S. Fox, formerly of Plainfield, and also of this city, is the Democratic candidate for councilman of the 5th ward in Toledo, Ohio, and writes that his chances for success appear good at the present time, "anyway it goes to show we never quit." Mr. Fox is associated with the Collier-Barnett Co., manufacturers of all kinds of woodwork, and is a wide-awake, progressive young man, one who would represent his constituents ably and conscientiously.

More Books For Rental.

The rental collection for books, which was introduced at the public library a couple of months ago, when 16 volumes were purchased by voluntary contributions, has proven a great success, and already the sum of nearly $10 has been collected by the librarian. Six other books were received here last week and added to the rental collection. The authors and titles of the volumes are as follows: Wright, H. B., Calling of Dan Matthews; McCutcheon, G. B., Truxton King; White, Wm. A., Certain Rich Man; MacGrath, Goose girl; Merwin, Bannister, The Girl and the bill; Leroux, Perfume of the Lady in Black.

A Progressive Party.

About twenty girls and boys were entertained at a progressive party, last Friday evening, the guest of honor being Lawrence Edwards. The company met at the home of Miss Agnes Forsyth on Clark street and were served with Macedonia fruit before proceeding on their way to the home of Miss Janette McCready, 118 McCulloch street, where a meat course gave them sustenance until they reached the C. H. Grant home at 805 Wisconsin street. Here Forest and Myron Grant were the hosts at a sandwich and coffee spread, and the party came to a very pleasant close at the home of Misses Nina and Orelle Macklin, 410 McCulloch street, where ice cream and cake were served.

IS CERTAIN TO BE BUILT

Engineers Will Soon be in the Field Locating Line for New Electric Railway.

The Chicago & Wisconsin Valley railroad will mean much to the city of Portage, says J. E. Jones, editor of the Democrat and treasurer of the new electric railway company. It will be built to handle freight in car lots, as well as all kinds of package freight. It will give our city a connection with the Northwestern and the Illinois Central which reaches the territory to which so much of our farm products go. This will be the central point on the line between Merrill and Janesville and would make the model place for the shops of the company.

The company has opened offices in the city hall and will soon have the engineers in the field to locate the line between Portage and Stevens Point which will be the first part of the road built. The frequent service of the Wisconsin Valley will be a great boon to Portage and will be worth more to our city than anything else that could possibly happen. It is certain to build.

The Beauty of Nature.

During the beautiful balmy days of fall, and before the sudden change in temperature last Sunday, which caused the leaves to fall in showers, Portage county was truly one of the beauty spots on earth. A spin to the northeast in the F. J. Blake auto, last Thursday, when points in three counties, Rosholt in Portage county, Norse in Waupaca county, and Galloway, Holt and Bevent, in Marathon county, were visited for a brief time, was certainly an enjoyable trip. The beauty of the foliage in its many tints and hues cannot either be described or painted, and carried with it an enchantment that must be experienced to be appreciated. That part of the county is also settling up rapidly, new farms being opened up on all sides, and lands that sold for $5 and $6 an acre a few years ago, cannot be bought for three times that price at present.

Fox Elected Secretary.

At the last international convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters, held at Montreal, Canada, Gustave Keller of Appleton was elected high treasurer. For several years he had ably performed the duties of state secretary of the order in Wisconsin, which position he resigned shortly after being elected to the more responsible office. Delegates to the state convention held at Racine last June were called upon to express by ballot their choice of a successor to Mr. Keller, the votes being counted at Appleton last evening and resulted in the selection of Leo P. Fox of Chilton, county superintendent of schools of Calumet county. Mr. Fox received 79 votes to 70 for John E. McCabe of Superior. The new secretary is in every way qualified to follow in the footsteps of his brilliant predecessor.

Bold Interesting Meeting.

The local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held their first meeting of the season with Mrs. W. W. Mitchell, Tuesday afternoon, when interesting reports of the doings at the state conference, held at Waukesha last week, were made by Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Martha Baker. All state officers were re-elected, and it was decided to dedicate a chair in the Continental Hall, Washington, D. C., in memory of the late Mrs. James Sidney Peck of Milwaukee, and also purchase a box for use of Wisconsin members when they visit that noted structure. Wisconsin now has 23 chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and each is entitled to two delegates at the annual state gathering.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Wisconsin Novelty Company Now Fully Organized and Ready for Business—Headquarters in Stevens Point.

The Wisconsin Novelty Co., a new corporation organized by Stevens Point business men, held a stockholders meeting last Monday evening and elected the following officers: Pres.—W. E. Kingsbury. Vice Pres.—Bernard Kane. Secretary—C. E. Emmons. Treasurer—H. H. Pagel. State Agent—B. Kane. All of the above will also act as a board of directors.

As heretofore mentioned in The Gazette, the company was organized for the purpose of handling the Wisconsin agency for a number of valuable attachments to be placed on sewing machines, among them being a small metal wheel for sharpening knives, scissors and needles, a metal fan, a polisher for ladies' shoes, and a device for polishing all kinds of jewelry. The different parts will be shipped here from factories located in various portions of the country, packed in neat boxes and sold to dealers and householders. An office and warerooms will be rented within the next few days. Local owners of sewing machines are invited to call at Mr. Emmons' store and inspect the new devices in operation on the machine he will have in one of his show windows.

Little Child Burned.

Frances, the little one and one-half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Bacon, 714 Reserve street, while playing about a bonfire that the older children had built in the family backyard, Friday afternoon, was painfully burned on the right side, including her hand, arm and shoulder, the skin coming off. The other children had left little Frances, who evidently had just ignited some dry grass, and the fire caught her sleeve. Mrs. Bacon, who had just gone out to call the children to supper, ran and put out the fire and Dr. Southwick was called. The little unfortunate will soon entirely recover.

A Remarkable Escape.

Jos. Petrick, the young man who fell from a smoke stack at Ladysmith, upon which he was at work, one week ago last Saturday, had a most remarkable escape from instant death. He was about 80 feet from the ground, and was about to descend on a rope, when through some misunderstanding the wrong signal was given with the result that he lost his hold and fell the entire distance. In coming down one foot struck a projection, tearing the shoe from his foot, thus easing the fall and possibly saving his life. He remained unconscious for about half an hour after being picked up, and while badly bruised and with one ankle more than twice its normal size, no bones were broken. Joe is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Petrick, of Casimir, twenty years of age, and is now being cared for at the family home.

Pioneer Resident of Almond.

John D. Beggs, a pioneer of the town of Almond, is dead at the age of 86 years, and the funeral took place from the Spirit Land school house at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon of last week, Rev. U. E. Gibson officiating. The deceased was a native of Vermont, born at North Hero, Aug. 12, 1823. From 1840 to 1850 the family lived in New York and the latter year they came to Wisconsin. Mr. Beggs returned to the east the following year, where he was married to Miss Susan Tucker and they came to Wisconsin at once. Mr. and Mrs. Beggs were the parents of twelve children, three of whom are dead and those who survive are Mrs. A. A. Abbott, Everett O. Robert R. Frederick W. R. Mrs. Clara Abbott, Nelson H. Mrs. Stephen Vroman, Jesse S. and Myron W. A sister, Mrs. Hulda O'Neill, resides at Rosendale, and a brother, Wm. R. Beggs, at North Branch, Minn. Deceased is also survived by thirty grandchildren and thirteen great grandchildren. Mr. Beggs was one of the best known residents of Almond and the many friends that he made during his more than half century residence there, will regret to learn of his taking away.

Mrs. Dawley's Mother Dies.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Dawley, of Stockton, were called to Wautoma last week by the death of Mrs. Dawley's mother, Mrs. Asa Cogswell, who passed away on Monday and was buried the following Wednesday. Mrs. Cogswell was in the 71st year of her age. On the 9th of September she suffered a stroke of paralysis from the effects of which she did not fully recover and a couple of days before her death she received another stroke.

The Cogswell family had been residents of Wauwasha county for upwards of forty years and during the past thirty years the deceased lady and her husband lived in the village of Wautoma. She is survived by the widower and two daughters, Mrs. Dawley and Mrs. Susie O'Harrow of Fond du Lac. Mr. Cogswell, a civil war veteran and past 80 years of age, has been in feeble health for a long time.

A Sudden Change.

Our Indian summer weather of last week was followed by a cold wave on Sunday, with rain during the forenoon, still colder on Monday and another drop in the temperature on Tuesday, with snow and piercing winds. The first snow of the season fell on Monday, covering the ground to a depth of nearly an inch.

HOLD A LONG MEETING

Board of Education Adjourned at 11:15 Monday Night, After Long Discussions Upon Different Subjects.

The board of education met in regular monthly meeting, Monday evening, with all members present except Cartmill and Gano. After the usual budget of bills had been read and allowed, Jas. B. Sullivan, who has the contract for the new heating arrangement in the Fourth ward, stated that a portion of the school chimney would have to be taken down, rebuilt and raised, as it is not large enough. This matter was referred to the committee on repairs and supplies, with power to act. Mr. Sullivan was also allowed a portion of his bill, according to contract. The matter of having the Johnson Service Co. inspect the High school heating and ventilating apparatus, was left to the committee on supplies, and the clerk was instructed to correspond with Lewis & Kitchen, of Chicago, relative to their bill of $170.45, being a percentage on plans furnished for the heating in the Fourth ward building and the water system in the Third ward building.

The resignation of Miss Anna Dunegan as a kindergarten teacher was read and accepted. A list of supplies and alterations wanted at the High school building and asked for by the superintendent, was referred to the committee on supplies with power to act. The clerk reported that he had received $16.75 for scrap iron sold from the old Fourth ward furnace and $25 from A. J. Clements for rent.

The teachers' committee reported recommending the engagement of Miss Frances Elder of Bloomington, Ind., as assistant in science in the High school at a salary of $65 per month; that the second grade departments in the Fourth ward be combined into one and placed in charge of Miss Merle Raymond; that Miss Louise Scott be assigned to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Anna Dunegan at $40 per month; that Miss Mable Reading be assigned as assistant in the fifth and sixth grades in the Fourth ward; that Miss Ethel Scott, supervisor of kindergartens, be relieved of visitation to the other departments, and that no assistant be engaged in the place of Miss Louise Scott; also that the fourth grade in the Fourth ward be transferred from the Boyer building to the room in the main building made vacant by the consolidation of the two second grade departments. They further recommended that the salary of Miss MacNeese, teacher of the deaf, be fixed at $85 per month for the year, and that the clerk draw a special check for $10 due her for the month of September, in pursuance of the adoption of this recommendation, and that the committee be empowered to provide a satisfactory assistant, providing that the expense of this department shall not exceed the appropriations made therefor by the state.

The reading of the report was followed by a long discussion, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Clements, saying that although he had signed the report, he was not in favor of another assistant in the High school. Supt. Davis explained matters at length to the effect that another assistant is required in order to give pupils the necessary work, as all the teachers now have all they can do. Pres. Young and others joined in the discussion, advocating economy in expenses, and Mr. Blood moved that that part of the report referring to the engaging of another assistant in the High school be laid over for one month, which motion was adopted, after which the original report, as amended, was also adopted. Mr. Simonson and Mr. Clements stated that complaint had been made to them of teachers going to their schools late and getting out very early, leaving the buildings, in fact, before their pupils.

The matter of having dances in connection with the schools, such as the junior prom., was also discussed at length, but no action taken. The matter was brought up by Mr. Clements on account of the fact that when the last dancing party was given in a public hall, a reception was held at the same time in the school by some who do not believe in dancing, and it was advocated that when an entertainment is given it should be the kind that all can participate in.

The superintendent and school board officers were given power to act relative to having teachers attend the convention at Eau Claire this week. The committee on supplies was given power to act relative to the purchase of new seats.

Bids for extending the sewer to the Third ward building were read as follows, the same to include all material and work: Peter Adams, $95; T. E. Cauley, 35 cents per ft. The latter bid was considered the lower and was referred to the supply committee with power to act.

Supt. Davis, as chief truancy officer, made a report relative to children being out of the schools, giving their names and the reasons that they are or have been out, and after his report was accepted and placed on file, he was authorized to co-operate with the district attorney in an effort to have all children of school age enroll in some school.

Treas. Krembs made a report showing a balance on hand Oct. 1st of $11,690, or over $2,000 more than at this time last year. The meeting then adjourned, the hour being 11:15.

Stevens Point High School.

The class of 1891, whose members were entertained by Mrs. F. J. Blood last week, as mentioned on the second page of this issue, also enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Belle Mitchell, at her home on Clark street, Monday evening.

Dancing Party.

On Thursday evening of next week, the 21st inst., there will be a dancing party at Elks' hall, to which all are invited. It will be given for the benefit of the boys' club room at the public library. Tickets will be on sale at the Krembs and Taylor Bros. drug stores at 75 cents per couple. No invitations will be sent out, but all who are interested in the welfare of the boys of our city, or those who enjoy the club room during the winter months, are asked to assist in the good cause by at least purchasing a ticket.

Home From California.

Fred M. Ferrell, the well known and popular traveling representative for the Middleton Mfg. Co., of Milwaukee, has returned from a visit of three months in different parts of the west, most of the time in California, having had a delightful trip. On the way east he stopped at Kallispel, Mont., to attend the wedding of a nephew. His little daughter, Florence, is now with her aunt at Tonopah, Nevada, a bustling metropolitan city, where she expects to enjoy the climate for the coming year, remaining out of school, but devoting her time to music and French. Mr. Ferrell will at once resume operations on the road and keep busy until the holiday season.

Camping at DuBay's Crossing.

A party of Stevens Pointers, consisting of W. L. Bronson, John Martini, E. A. Arenberg, John Schmitt, Elmar Pendergrast and Aug. Goder, left for Du Bay's crossing, about fourteen miles up the Wisconsin river, Sunday afternoon, to spend a week camping, having a fine outfit of tents and other necessities for an enjoyable outing. The place selected is not only an ideal camping spot, but is also closely associated with the early history of Portage county and the Wisconsin river valley, having been the home of the late John B. Du Bay for many years, and in the pioneer days was headquarters for a large trading business. The ashes of his squaw wife are said to repose beneath the shadows of the pines, a few feet from where the campers have pitched their tents.

No Mail Order Houses Here.

Roberts & MacAvinche, a reputable advertising agency of Chicago, has written The Gazette for its rates on advertising for one of the large mail order houses of that city, wanting to run weekly advertisements, entirely from plate to be furnished, as large as an entire page, and assuring us they have done a satisfactory business with many newspapers in the past. Of course they are willing to pay a liberal price for space in this paper, even more than we charge home advertisers, knowing that we have a large local and general circulation, but this reply was promptly made, "The Gazette does not advertise for mail order houses." Wonder if every local business is as solicitous for the upbuilding of home industry when he is called upon to give an order for printing, calendars, etc., by outside concerns?

FOUND DEAD NEAR TRACKS

Stephen Kaiser, a Former Young Stevens Pointer, Meets With Sad Death at Horicon, His Home.

Stephen Kaiser, a former resident of this city, was found dead, lying at the side of the C. & M. St. P. tracks in the village of Horicon, last Friday morning. He had evidently been struck by or had fallen from a moving train and the accident apparently happened the evening before. His neck was broken and the only other mark on the body was a slight bruise on the side of his head. He was employed as a car inspector for the Milwaukee road, his territory being between Fond du Lac and Horicon. Just how the accident happened will probably never be known.

The unfortunate man was a native of Stevens Point, born in this city about 34 years ago, and was married to Miss Lena Bachman of Portage, who survives him, together with six small children, four girls and two boys. Before leaving Stevens Point he worked in the Central shops, but after their removal, he went to Portage where he was employed as a car inspector for the company and resided there until a short time ago, when he entered the employ of the other railroad company. His father died a couple of years ago, and besides his immediate family, he is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Stephen Kaiser, who resides at 530 Jefferson street, one sister, Mrs. Michael Peck of Menasha, and three brothers, Matt Kaiser of Fond du Lac, Joseph Kaiser of Abbotford and John Kaiser of Milwaukee.

The remains were interred at Horicon. It is learned that Mr. Kaiser was engaged in repairing a car at the time of his death. The track at the point where the accident happened is on a curve and there were 30 or 40 cars to the west of the one he was working on. Opposite this car he had a danger flag set, but an engine must have backed onto the sidetrack at the west of the yard, butting into the cars standing on the sidetrack, forcing them down upon the car under which Mr. Kaiser was at work, dragging him some distance, breaking his neck and mangle his body.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY

Mrs. Leola Goff Barker Passes Away Tuesday Morning, Death Resulting From Ptomaine Poisoning.

Mrs. Leola Goff Barker passed away at the family residence, 446 Clark street, at 9:30 Tuesday morning, and the announcement of her death came as a shock and great surprise to all who knew her. While it was known that Mrs. Barker had been ill, her condition was not considered critical, even by the attending physician, and she was able to sit up and be wheeled out into the sitting room as late as last Friday. Monday night she rested nicely, and when her sister, Mrs. Ida Pipe, who slept on a couch near her bed, arose at about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, she appeared to be enjoying a natural, quiet sleep. Thereafter she awoke and appeared perfectly conscious, but later her niece, Miss Mabel Pipe, heard her breathing heavily and called the other members of the household. Dr. Rice, who happened to be passing, was called in and recognized at once that the lady was dying, the attending physician, Dr. Rogers also being summoned and did everything possible for her relief, but she quietly passed away at the above hour, death being directly due to heart failure, the result of ptomaine poisoning.

While in Chicago about six weeks ago, where she went for the purpose of purchasing her fall stock of millinery goods, Mrs. Barker contracted ptomaine poisoning from eating mushroom sauce on steak, and although she returned home the following day and everything possible was done to counteract the poison in her system, she had gradually failed, being confined to her bed most of the time. Notwithstanding that she had two relapses during her illness, her recovery was looked for.

The deceased lady was born at Green Bay, July 25, 1873. Her maiden name was Leola Goff and she was the second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Goff, who removed to Stevens Point when she was a small child. She was educated in our public schools and eight years ago was married to Jerome L. Barker, a former mayor and assistant postmaster of this city, who is now located at Joplin, Mo. Dr. Goff died 12 years ago and she is survived by her aged mother, one sister, Mrs. Ida Pipe, and the latter's two children, Miss Mable and Warren Pipe, all of whom have always resided at the old homestead at 446 Clark street. Mrs. Barker was a bright, intelligent woman, of a social, kindly disposition, and all who knew her will sympathize with the aged mother, devoted sister, niece and nephew in her taking away. For the past few years she had conducted a parlor millinery business at the family home and had been most successful. This will now be continued by the other members of the family.

The funeral will take place from the house at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, short services being conducted by Rev. J. A. Stemen, pastor of the Presbyterian church, followed by interment in Forest cemetery. The nephew, Warren Pipe, who is traveling for a Minneapolis concern, left here Monday morning, but it is expected that he will be reached in time to return for the funeral.

Four Score and Ten.

John Kasch, of Linwood, was called to Oakfield, Fond du Lac county, last Sunday, by the death of his father, John Kasch, Sr., who was 90 years of age, the oldest resident of that village, having been born in Germany, July 28, 1819. Besides the son, one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Tesch, with whom the deceased resided, survives. He had lived in Fond du Lac county for many years. The funeral was held at Brillion, where he formerly resided, today.

Robbed a Cigar Store.

Someone entered the cigar factory of Alex Wallace on Strongs avenue, last Thursday night, and carried away about $25 worth of tobacco and cigars and between $8 and $10 in change that had been left in the cash register. An entrance was effected by cutting a pane of glass from one of the windows in the rear, but being unable to get into the main room, another glass had to be broken from a window between the two parts, thereby giving the thief an opportunity to unlatch the door that separated the two rooms.

High School Notes.

Waupaca High school defeated the local High at foot ball, last Saturday afternoon, by a score of 6 to 0.

The football team had signal rehearsal Tuesday afternoon in the assembly room, a talk by Coach Lau and a general going over of the plays.

The annual fair and supper held Friday night was a decided success and the proceeds will put the athletic association in fine financial shape. About $160 was realized.

Work on the "Nooz" has been commenced. Business Manager Welch is busy filling up the advertising section, and subscriptions will soon be solicited. Have your money ready.

At a meeting of the new "Nooz" staff, Tuesday evening, several vacancies were filled and a plan of campaign for the year worked out. The first number will be ready about the end of this month.

Not in the least disheartened by Saturday's defeat, the foot ball team is hard at it again, regardless of the elements. The next game is at Merrill, Saturday, and the team is anxious to make a good showing.

The loss of Moen at left tackle has been felt considerably by the foot ball team and several men have been tried out at that position. The next game here will be with Merrill, Oct. 24. Merrill has a strong team and a tough fight is anticipated.

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION

Some Advice Against the Use of Harsh Purgatives and Physics.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98 per cent. of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver. This condition poisons the system with waste matter and causes accumulation of gases which must be removed through the bowels before health can be restored.

Salts, ordinary pills and cathartics may be truly likened to dynamite. Through their harsh, irritating action they force a passage through the bowels, causing pain and damage to the delicate intestinal structure which weakens the whole system, and at best only produces temporary relief. The repeated use of such treatments causes chronic irritation of the stomach and bowels, dries and hardens their tissues, deadens their nerves, stiffens their muscles and generally brings about an injurious habit which sometimes has almost, if not fatal results.

We have a pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of its great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case where it fails to produce entire satisfaction. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies. We urge you to try them at our entire risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly and have a soothing, strengthening, healing, regulative influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, diarrhoea, excessive looseness or other annoying effects, and they may be taken at any time without inconvenience. Rexall Orderlies overcome the drug-giving habit and safely remedy constipation and associate ailments, whether acute or chronic, except in surgical cases. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Price, 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Stevens Point only at our store—The Rexall Store, Alex. Krembs Jr. Drug Co., corner Main street and Strong's avenue.

FORMERLY LIVED HERE

John Rebaczyk, Drowned at Wausau Last Wednesday Morning—Remains are Brought Here For Burial.

John Rebaczyk, but who was known as John Fischer, was accidentally drowned in the Wisconsin river at Wausau last Wednesday morning. He was about 40 years of age and is survived by a widow and four children. Much of his life was spent in the town of Hull, north of this city, where he was born, but for several years he had lived at Wausau and was at work for the Mortenson Lumber Co. at the time of the accident. While a bridge crossing the river was undergoing repairs, it had been the custom of many people to cross from one side to another on a boom. This Fischer had been doing, but as the boom that morning was wet and slippery from the frost and dew, it is supposed he slipped off into the water and was unable to save himself. No one saw the accident and his absence was not noticed until about 10 o'clock, when his dinner pail was found floating among the logs. A search for the body was rewarded in about half an hour, when it was found about ten feet from the boom and six feet below the surface, his arms being around a "dead head" or sunken log, to which the drowning man clung in his desperation.

The body was brought here Thursday afternoon and taken to the home of his brother, Stephen Rebaczyk, in the town of Hull, accompanied by the widow and other friends. The funeral took place from the Catholic church at Casimir, Friday morning.

Thrashing in North Dakota.

Joseph Eiden, of New Hope, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting his sisters in this city while returning home from North Dakota. He had been in the west a couple of months, employed with a thrashing crew, and accumulated considerable experience and a goodly amount of coin. He would not recommend that country as a winter resort, a howling blizzard raging at Grand Forks when he left there last Thursday night.

Didn't Miss a Meal.

The hustling qualities of E. W. Sellers, one of our local real estate men, is well known in Stevens Point and vicinity, and to show that he can "go some," The Gazette publishes the fact that he left here at 3 o'clock last Wednesday morning, the Soo passenger being a little late, visited or transacted business at Fond du Lac, Milwaukee, Watertown, Johnson Creek, Chester, Waupun and Oshkosh, traveled about thirty miles by livery or stage, got shaved, didn't miss a meal and reached home at 1:45 Thursday morning, having been away less than twenty-three hours. The trip from Chester to Waupun was made by stage, and to make time and connections livery rigs were hired at other points.

Pretty Minnesota Wedding.

A friend of The Gazette writes the following account of the marriage of Miss Katherine Blanche Leonard and John J. Wysocki, which took place at Kellogg, Minn., on the 4th inst., and was mentioned in our last issue: The wedding was a very pretty affair. The nuptial knot was tied at 9 o'clock at St. Agnes church. The bride wore a creation of white silk and lace and carried a profuse shower bouquet of bridal roses. Miss May McGaffery, who acted as bridesmaid, wore a white batiste, trimmed with valencian lace and carried a bouquet of white carnations. A four course breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. J. Hagers.

The bride is a handsome young lady of high repute. She has been teaching in the schools of Hettinger for the past two years. Her home is in Hettinger, North Dakota. By the many presents received we judge that she has many friends. The groom is one of the best known young men of Stevens Point. For the past two years he has been working for the International Harvester Co., making his headquarters at Aberdeen, S. D. He has been associated with the company for several years and is one of the hustlers in that business.

Among friends from out of town were Miss Molly Leonard, of Hettinger, N. D., the bride's sister; Miss Prexeda Wysocki, of Colfax, Wis., the groom's sister; Miss Leila McDermott, of Minneapolis; Mrs. McGaffery, of Wabasha, Minn.; and Mrs. Leonard, of Melville.

JUST ABOUT THE WEATHER

Some Thoughts of a Correspondent Concerning the Delightful Indian Summer in This Section.

For a couple of weeks the people living in this portion of Wisconsin, at least, enjoyed weather that was truly ideal—so perfect in fact that even those with little or no sentiment in their make-up found occasion to use a few adjectives in expressing their appreciation of the weather man's good work. Anent the delightful Indian summer our Knowlton correspondent makes the following contribution:

Let Sunday, Oct. 3, 1909, go down in the annals of memory as one of the most perfect and idealistic days that could ever be chronicled. It was no illusive dream, no fantasy, but a reality that we hope was appreciated by every member of the human family that lived in northern Wisconsin. The country scenery being embellished with its various deep toned and beautiful colors: the sun with its bright limbed glow; the air so fresh, pure and intoxicating, with its richness. Just enough vibration to enhance outdoor pleasures; any of them could even be indulged in by the most delicate invalid, as the whole could not help acting as a tonic for both body and soul. It was so profoundly glorious that one was almost ready to forgive and forget any trouble of past or present and become happy with the thankful spirit of being allowed this privilege of participating in such earthly glory.

Could the day have passed with not one blemish to mar this earthly picture, how grand would it have been! We dread to take up the daily papers and learn to our sorrow that such was not the case, finding that someone had defaced and trespassed upon the grandeur of this memory day.

ILLNESS ENDS FATALLY

Christopher Frederickson, Head Sawyer at Week Mill for Years, Dies After Long Illness.

Christopher Frederickson, who lived in Stevens Point for many years previous to about six years ago, died at his home in the town of Eau Claire at 1 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon after an illness of several months with cancer of the stomach, he having suffered greatly during much of this time.

The deceased was born in Sundahl, Norway, Apr. 16, 1856, and was therefore in his 54th year. He came to America and thence to Stevens Point about 30 years ago, being employed in the woods and mills, and for the past 26 years had been employed as head sawyer in the John Week Lumber Co. mill, but was compelled to resign in July on account of failing health. While a resident of the city he lived on the West Side, buying a farm in Eau Claire six years ago but continued to hold his position in the mill during the sawing season. He was a man in whom his employers and all who shared his acquaintance had implicit confidence, being of a generous, industrious disposition, true to his family and friends. His death is regretted by all.

The funeral took place Friday, there being a prayer at the house at 12 o'clock and then the funeral procession started for this city, arriving at Trinity Lutheran church at 3 o'clock, where services were conducted by Rev. O. T. Boe, of Waupaca. The pallbearers were John Hafason, L. R. Anderson, Ole Roseth, James Decker, Axel Peterson and Chas. Nicholson. There were many beautiful floral offerings, and the funeral was largely attended by friends from Eau Claire, Carson and this city, the week mills being closed during the day in memory of the deceased.

All the material in good condition was shipped direct to Panama and upwards of a carload sent to Saginaw, Mich., for overhauling. As soon as this work is finished Mr. Baker expects to go to Panama and superintend the mill's erection on a tract of 70,000 acres of valuable timber land owned by the corporation whose headquarters is at Peoria Ill.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Wadder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

BUSINESS BASEBALL.

The Advent of Gate Receipts in the National Game.

The professional baseball player, as such, was unknown before the civil war. One finds, indeed, signs in the newspapers of the period that our "sporting men" drew no very sharp line between the amateur and the occasional professional. That perhaps was only natural. Athletics were a new thing to us. We had yet to learn the dangers and the finer ethics of sport. For example, the first convention of amateur clubs, held in 1859, felt called upon to pass a rule against paying players. There was no money in the game as yet, only glory, but certain rascally members of the fashionable clubs had begun to lure stars from other clubs by offers of money or "jobs."

The foundation stone of professional baseball, however, was laid when the Atlantics, the Eckfords, the Mutuals and the other crack teams of Brooklyn began playing on the old Union grounds. This arena was a fenced basin used in winter as a skating rink. In 1862 the owners decided to make it continuously profitable by turning it into a summer baseball park. Experimentally they charged a regular ten cent fee at the gate. They found that spectators were willing to pay even when they raised the price to 25 cents. Half of these fees went to the ground owners and half to the clubs. So came the appetite for gate receipts, and "business" had entered the game.—Collier's Weekly.

Knew the Prospect.

Mr. Honeyman looked hopefully at the pleasant, rosy faced Norwegian girl with whom the manager of the employment bureau had accorded him an interview. "Can you wash and iron?" he asked.

"Yass, I do dose," responded the cheerful Minna.

"And can you wait on the table—I mean will you—answer the door-bell?" Mr. Honeyman faltered. "My wife is quite determined on those points."

"Yass, I do dose," and Minna continued to beam benevolently.

"And you can cook, of course," said Mr. Honeyman.

"Yass," said Minna for the third time. "I do dat fine ven you keep her busy so she do not help me."—Youth's Companion.

Mexico City's Pawnshop.

The Monte de Piedad of Mexico City is an old and peculiar institution. Being a government establishment, it corresponds in scope and object to similar national pawnshops, such as the Mont de Piete in Paris or the K. K. Versatamt in Vienna, but it is conducted on different business principles than those of the European institutions. Monte de Piedad was established in 1776 by Don Pedro Romero de Tiereros, count of Regia, a wealthy mine owner, with the approval of the government, which at a later period took the business over itself.—Argonaut.

DETECTIVE STORIES.

Little Things as Aids in Solving Problems in Crime.

THE VALUE OF SMALL CLEWS

"In All My Experience," Says Police Sergeant Cuff, One of Wilkie Collins' Creations, "I Have Never Yet Met Such a Thing as a Trifle."

If you ask some London publishers they will tell you that no book sells so well as a detective story and that people still find a fascination in the achievements of Edgar Allan Poe's Dupin, Gaborian's Lecocq and Tabaret and the redoubtable Sergeant Cuff of Wilkie Collins.

These men were the forerunners of Sherlock Holmes, and their feats of criminal tracking were as remarkable as those achieved by the famous character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Perhaps the least known is Cuff, who figures in "The Moonstone."

Cuff looked for clues in trifles. Investigating a smear on a newly painted door, he was told by the superintendent who had the case in hand that it was made by the petticoats of the women servants. The superintendent said petticoats were trifles.

"In all my experience along the dirtiest ways of this dirty little world," replied Cuff, "I have never met such a thing as a trifle yet. We must see the petticoat that made the smear, and we must know for certain that the paint was wet."

Lecocq, the beau ideal of the French detective, was wont to explain his deductions to assistants, just as Sherlock Holmes did to his friend Watson. In the story of "File No. 113" a safe has been robbed. There is a scratch on the door of the safe which seems to have been made by the key slipping from the lock. But Lecocq explained that the paint was hard and that the scratch could not have been made by the trembling hand of the thief letting the key slip.

He therefore had an iron box made, painted with green varnish, like the safe. As Lecocq inserted the key he asked the assistant to endeavor to prevent him from using the key just as he was about to insert it in the lock. The assistant did so, and the key held by Lecocq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door and traced upon it a diagonal scratch from top to bottom, the exact reproduction of the one shown in a photograph of the safe. Thus it was proved that two persons were present at the robbery—one wished to take the money and the other to prevent its being taken.

In the play Sherlock Holmes, the detective, with the aid of an accomplice, raises an alarm of fire at the house of the Larrabees, during the excitement of which he is able to investigate the mystery of the purloined documents.

A somewhat similar incident occurs in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Purloined Letter," when Dupin, having obtained entrance to the house of a minister of the state who had purloined a letter of great importance from a lady, wished to take it from its hiding place—a card rack over the mantelpiece—and substitute a facsimile. While Dupin was talking to the minister there was a sudden report of a pistol beneath the window, followed by fearful screams and loud shouting. The minister rushed to the window, and while his attention was thus distracted Dupin took the real letter and substituted the false one which he had prepared. Needless to say, the diversion had been created by Dupin's assistants.

Although "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" somewhat overshadow the stories of other detectives which appeared in the Strand Magazine, one should not forget to mention Martin Hewitt, investigator, and Dick Donovan.

Both these detectives worked alone and were past masters in the art of solving robbery mysteries, murders and the crimes of secret societies.

And the value of noting trifles, particularly in detective work, is strikingly illustrated in "The Case of Mr. Fogatt." The latter had been murdered in his chamber, which was situated at the top of the building in which Hewitt had an office. Hewitt was the first one on the scene. The door was locked, and when he got inside the room he found Fogatt lying across the table, shot dead. There was a sheer drop of fifty feet outside the windows. How had the murderer got in, and how had he escaped?

On the sideboard were the freshly bitten remains of an apple. Hewitt noticed that it had been bitten by a person who had lost two teeth, one at the top and one below. He also saw that the dead man had an excellent set of false teeth, with none missing. He observed, too, that an active young man could, by standing on the window sill, draw himself on the roof and thus escape. Thus Hewitt comes to look for a tall, athletic looking young man with two teeth missing. He finds him, obtains by a ruse another apple which he has bitten, compares the two and ultimately obtains the startling story of the murder from the murderer himself after the coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "accidental death."—London Tit-Bits.

It is the little pleasures which make life sweet, as the little displeasures may do more than afflictions can to make it bitter.

Confide a secret to a dumb man and it will make him speak.—Lirionian.

AMERICA'S GRACE DARLING.

Ida Lewis, Keeper of Lime Rock Lighthouse, and Her Wonderful Record.

When the name of Ida Lewis appears in print it is usually in connection with some new act of heroism that she has performed. This was the case recently when a rowboat containing five girls upset and Miss Lewis single handed went to their rescue and saved them from drowning with a bravery and vigor astonishing in one of her age.

This remarkable woman, called the "Grace Darling of America," has been keeper of Lime Rock Lighthouse, off Newport Harbor, R. I., for many years.

IDA LEWIS.

As a girl she assisted her father in this work, succeeded him after his death in 1879 and is still caring for the light which so many mariners depend on for safely making the harbor. She was only seventeen when her first rescue was made, a very daring one, of the crew of a boat that upset near the lighthouse in a storm. Since then she has risked her life time and again, her last rescue placing twenty-three lives to her credit.

In recognition of the work of Miss Lewis congress and American and foreign societies have decorated her with medals, and her snug little home in the lighthouse is filled with testimonials of her heroism. In 1907 she was awarded a pension of $30 a month for life by the Carnegie hero fund. In 1879 General Grant presented Miss Lewis with a boat named the Rescue. Every seafaring man on the New England coast knows Ida Lewis, and her home on the rocks has been visited by hundreds of prominent men and women.

Miss Lewis receives $750 a year from the government as lighthouse keeper.

MRS. H. CLAY PIERCE.

Bride of Oil Magnate a Noted Beauty and Society Queen.

The name of H. Clay Pierce, the multimillionaire oil magnate of New York and St. Louis, will hereafter appear quite frequently in a part of the newspaper where it has heretofore not often been seen. This will be in the society columns, for in marrying Mrs. Virginia Burrows in London recently he wed a woman who is famous for her social entertainments. Mrs. Pierce has gained a distinguished social position abroad in the most exclusive of English and continental society and last spring entertained the king and queen of England.

The bride of Mr. Pierce is forty-three years of age and has been noted for her beauty since childhood. She is an accomplished linguist and musician, and it was while studying music in

MRS. H. CLAY PIERCE.

New York that she met her first husband, Mr. Burrows, who died six years ago. After his death she retained their residence in the east, but made frequent visits to St. Louis. Here she met Mr. Pierce, and here in 1907 the oil magnate's romance began. At that time the beautiful widow promised that when her daughter had had the advantages of two years on the continent she would return to America as his bride. The busy man of affairs plunged into a ceaseless round of business matters to await the passing of the two years. The time was up, recently, and today the happy couple are touring France in the bridegroom's seventy horsepower auto.

Mrs. Pierce is a daughter of Major William Russell Prickett, a retired banker and millionaire of Edwardsville, Ill. She will prove a charming hostess at Mr. Pierce's numerous residence places. He has a mansion in New York, another in St. Louis, a large country house and game preserve in Newfoundland, a country place at Fride's Crossing, Mass., hunting lodges in Wisconsin and Texas and a seagoing yacht.

A LONDON DINNER.

The Scene Is Elegant and Impressive, but, Oh, So Sad!

"A German" thus writes the London Mail: A dinner is in progress at a first class hotel. Elegant toilets, splendid surroundings—and an absence of sound! Slowly, stiffly, like automata, the dining ladies and gentlemen proceed with their meal. The scene is undoubtedly very impressive, but, oh, so sad! Amid the sparkle of jewels and silver and crystal and porcelain, amid a scene that fairly invites, begs, cries for a bright smile, a low, rippling laugh or at least that deep, and muted hum that makes itself otherwise noticed wherever there is a large gathering, the diners sit in expectation of the judgment day. Sometimes somebody does speak—one word or two. The lips hardly part. The other nods his head in terrible earnest. Then silence reigns supreme again.

A friend who had been in England once related a story, the point of which I have never fully appreciated until now. Like myself, the first time he had entered a dining room in London he looked around in surprise. Finally toward the end of the meal he called the waiter. "Tell me, please," he asked, "does anybody ever laugh here?"

"Well," replied the waiter, "I am sorry to say that we have had some complaints, but not often, sir—not often."

THE LOADED GUN.

A Most Dangerous Thing to Have Around the Home.

The loaded pistol in the home is an object of danger, wherever it may be placed. To be of any use in an emergency it must be within easy reach. If it is within easy reach it may figure in a homicide or a suicide. The suddenly awakened person may kill a member of the household by mistake. A child may find it and explode it. If it is not within easy reach it might as well be in a shop downtown as far as resisting burglars or serving a useful purpose is concerned. If it is put away as a curiosity it should always be unloaded. If the weapon is a relic of the past, a specimen of an ancient form of gunmaking, it is just as interesting with its chambers empty as with them filled.

Of course pistols may be put away loaded with the full intention of having them safely fired or unloaded later and then forgotten. This is a matter that cannot be neglected without danger. The loaded gun is a menace to life as long as it remains loaded and within reach. Even at the bottom of a trunk it is possible cause of trouble. It behooves everybody to make sure that there are none of these hidden weapons on the premises, to be found by rummaging children or suddenly disclosed in the course of housecleaning or changes.—Washington Star.

Fines in Germany.

The German workman who the other day was fined in a London police court probably considered that he had a genuine grievance when he complained that, in addition to the fine, his compulsory attendance at the court had lost him a day's pay. For they do these things better—at any rate, from the delinquents' point of view—in the fatherland. For what may be described as a trivial offense the worker is not compelled to attend the court, and the amount of the fine is collected from him at his house by a policeman. In the event of a more serious though still comparatively venial breach of the law, punishable by a short term of imprisonment, justice is satisfied if he works off the time by installments Sundays and holidays.—London Chronicle.

George Meredith.

The legend that in his early days the late George Meredith was so poor that he invested all his funds in a sack of oatmeal, subsisting thereon while he wrote "Evan Harrington," is denied by Mr. J. A. Hammerton in his book "George Meredith in Anecdote and Criticism." One part of that picturesque if baseless story was to the effect that the novelist was not able to buy fuel and was accustomed to carry the bag of oatmeal across the rooms to keep himself warm.

No Harm Done.

"We've been having a regular clearance at home," explained Mr. X, at the office, "throwing all sorts of old things away. I put one of my wedding presents on the fire this morning." "Did you really?" asked a horrified colleague. "What was it?" "A copper kettle," replied X.—London Mail.

Progression.

"But sometimes it's right to tell a white lie, isn't it?" "Perhaps. But I notice that when a man gets that idea once it isn't long till he becomes color blind."—Cleveland Leader.

If we had no fallings ourselves we should not take so much pleasure in finding out those of others.—Rochefoucauld.

The Modern Way.

One friend who has spent a long and useful life and looks good for another half century expects his reward in heaven and meantime is a philosopher. He can talk on any subject under the sun, from "the flower of poetry" to "the precession of the equinoxes." He apparently knows the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" by heart, so I knew that when he handed me a bit of verse it must be good.

"Here is a hymn on the solar system of some other lofty theme," thought I, placing the sheet in my letter case. When I arrived home I read: The lizard climbed a wall. He climbed it. He climbed it twice—then crawled away.

The bee stopped a flower. He stopped it once. He stopped it twice—then flew away.

The man kissed a maid. He kissed her once. He kissed her twice—then walked away.

The wall wasn't away; the flower had no money; The maid had no money. Funny!

The problem now is whether the contribution is a joke or a gem.—National Magazine.

Evidently Too Healthy.

For twenty years or more the late Dr. Brewer, of Evansville, Ill., made regular visits to Stevens Point, coming here five or six times each year, and since his death, about one year ago, his son, a Ft. Atkinson physician, had been covering the territory. Now the latter announces that he has discontinued his visits here. The same announcement is made by Dr. Turbin, of Chicago, who advertised himself as an expert specialist and surgeon of Berlin, Germany. Evidently the good people of this city and county are enjoying too good health to warrant visits from traveling specialists, or our home physicians are in every way able to care for them when indisposed.

The foot ball team met with a bad defeat at the hands of Chippewa Falls, last Saturday. Score 38 to 0. Again the greenness of our men was very apparent, they being outplayed by their opponents. The whole game was played in a continuous drizzle, considering which the fewness of the fumbles made was surprising. Tom Olson was the most consistent ground gainer for the locals. Our boys also gained by forward passes twice. The game was refereed by Cunningham, quarter on last year's Wisconsin varsity team and umpired by Regan of Michigan University, who seemed to take a special delight in penalizing our players. Two twenty-five minute halves were played. On the evening of the game a dance was held in the school gym, and the enjoyable hours spent there helped to lessen the sting of defeat.

Was Well Attended.

About That House You're Going To Build

It pays to look into the future. Suppose in 3 or 5 or 10 years some part of the structure should give trouble! If the plans or the workmanship were to blame, it would have shown sooner. So most likely you'll find the cause in the material. If you let us furnish it, this sort of thing can't happen. Our goods are all reliable. We realize our responsibility.

Bishop Keane in Milwaukee.

Rt. Rev. James J. Keane, bishop of Cheyenne, Wyo., was a central figure in Milwaukee all of last week, speaking nightly to thousands of people in the Auditorium. Bishop Keane's visit there was under the auspices of the local councils of Knights of Columbus, and his addresses were mainly for non-Catholics, different prominent men among the latter being selected to introduce the speaker each evening.

Speaking of his western home in an interview the bishop said: "Yes, it is a pioneer diocese. It is a vast territory, with the places of visitation very far apart, and it is because of this that I am enabled to come away and do this work. There is no reason why I should give these missions, rather than someone else, save that I have the time." (Parenthetically speaking, one knows that this is only Bishop Keane's modest habit of mind.)

"For though the distances are so great and the modes of travel not easy, still, I can make all my visitations in a comparatively short time. We travel largely along the waterways, going by wagon or stage, long the water courses. Within a short time the railroads have made much progress and have opened up the state, so that travel is a very different thing today from the travel of a few years ago, though there still remain many places where one must go by wagon. There was one journey into the interior of the state, 150 miles from the nearest station, which it took all day and all night and all next day, to make, by wagon. And the journey had to be made sitting up, too. There was no lying down for sleep, for the stage was always full. A community of sisters had a mission out there, among the Arapahoe Indians, and every time that one of them went out or one of them came in, she had to make this long journey."

"The wonderful western spirit of hospitality, frankness, generosity, trust in one's fellowman—that spirit of the true brotherhood of man—is beginning to pass away before the advance," the bishop paused a little before he spoke the word, "before the advance of civilization. I can see the difference that has come in the seven years that I have lived there, and it is too bad."

PAUL JONES' PROMISE.

Our Great Naval Hero and the Duchess of Chartres.

The Duchess of Chartres was an enthusiast in the cause of American liberty and a warm friend of its great naval champion, Paul Jones, whom she nicknamed the "Unlucky Knight of the Sea." The duchess was a royal princess and a very great lady, and Captain Jones was a sailor, self-educated and the son of a Scotch gardener, but in the exchange of gifts and compliments which, according to the custom of the day in France attended their friendship, he was not to be outshone.

At a luncheon which she gave just before he sailed from France in the Ranger on that famous cruise of his which carried the war to the very shore of Britain it was the good fortune of Paul Jones to share in a conversation touching a French naval engagement in which the grandfather of the duchess had borne a conspicuous part and to defend and explain his maneuvers on that occasion, showing a knowledge of every ship and every captain engaged and winning on the spot the ardent personal adherence of Mme. de Chartres.

At the close of the feast she presented him a valuable watch which had been her grandfather's. Taken by surprise, the American captain reverently accepted it with a grace that charmed the courtly company, promising that in return, if fortune favored him, he would some day "lay an English frigate at her feet."

It was a daring boast, but in A. O. Buell's biography of Paul Jones it is related how he kept it. Within two years occurred the marvelous victory of the Bonhomme Richard over the Serapis, concerning which the victor wrote the duchess a letter, ending, "The enemy surrendered at thirty-five minutes past 10 p. m. by your watch, which I consult only to fix the moment of victory."

That was a phrase to delight a society that reveled in pretty phrases, and the duchess was amply satisfied. When Paul Jones reached Paris she gave a grand banquet in his honor. Just before it ended he reminded her of her gift and his promise. A servant was sent to his room and returned with a long leather case, which the duchess took amid the exclamations and eager curiosity of the company.

"Your royal highness perceives the impossibility of keeping my promise in kind," explained the knight of the sea, smiling. "The English frigate proved to be a forty-four on two decks, and she is now at Lorient with French colors flying. The best I can do toward keeping my word of two years ago is to place in your dainty hands the sword of the brave officer who commanded her. I have the honor to surrender to the loveliest of women the sword surrendered to me by one of the bravest of men—the sword of Captain the Hon. Richard Pearson of his Britannic majesty's late ship, the Serapis."

A Pepper Duel.

A certain literary and diplomatic friend of ours once took part in a pepper duel at a foreign restaurant. He was provoked to the contention by the quantity of stimulating condiment that a stranger across the table indulged in. The stranger sprinkled an unconscionable quantity of red pepper upon his food and proceeded to devour it to the wonder and admiration of onlookers. Thereupon with studied nonchalance the American swallowed an immense piece of chili pepper. Then the stranger added more red pepper, then the American another larger slice, covered with cayenne, and so on, till it seemed as if both would explode, while the other diners looked on aghast. The American finally winning out with a prodigious dose defying all emulation.—Century.

Dust a Thousand Feet Thick.

China has its "bad lands," all dust and dreariness, and its irrigation wheels, and its "soul appalling" Gobi desert, along whose southern boundary lies the Great wall. In some of these regions the famous yellow dust of China lies to a depth of 1,000 feet, and when the wind blows the whole landscape is obscured. Yet it is upon this dust that the fertility of northern China depends. The Chinese call it "ginger powder."—Harper's.

Very Rude.

"Going to call on your new neighbors next door?"
"Not I. They insulted me the day they moved in."
"As to how?"
"Asked me to occupy a sofa on the sidewalk; said they feared I couldn't get a good view from behind the blinds."—Pittsburg Post.

THE YELLOW DRESS.

Two Love Scenes In Which It Played a Part.

By S. D. HACKLEY.

Copyright, 1922, by Associated Literary Press.

"May I see the gown?"
It was the sweetest of voices that spoke, and the brown eyes that looked inquiringly at the saleswoman of a clothing bureau in a large eastern city matched the voice.

The saleswoman led the way to a room filled with clothing and held upon her fingers a truly beautiful gown. It was of yellow satin, of the heavy kind that stands alone and glistens like cloth of gold.

The girl reverently touched the shining garment.
"It is magnificent," she cried; "just the thing for my tour!"

"It was donated by a wealthy woman whose daughter had worn it once and for some reason took a dislike to it," explained the saleswoman.

"How could she?" The girl held one rich fold to her face, studying its effect on her clear brunette complexion. "How could she?"

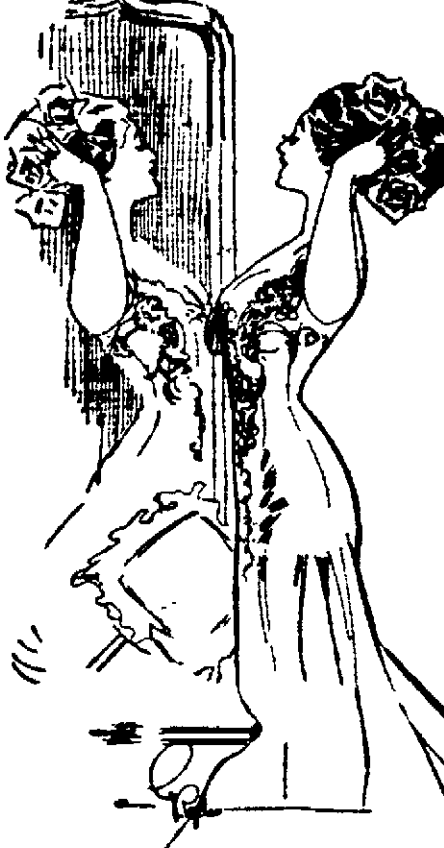

"I wonder myself," remarked the saleswoman as she took from her customer the $6 required for the exquisite creation.

"I thank you a thousand times," said the girl gratefully, "for saving it for me. You have made me perfectly happy!"

Leslie Reading was young in years for the professorship he held in the college for men in Alma Laurens' home city, very handsome, very grave in demeanor and—afraid of women.

Alma Laurens, only child of the wealthiest man in the city—Alma, with her red brown hair and her brilliant brown eyes, had a cluster of scalps at her belt, the scalps of those who had fallen victims to her charms and offered her their hearts and their names. Moreover, the object of her life was to add to this cluster.

"I was out in the Blue Bubble this afternoon," she said one evening to her cousin, "and just by the college yard

ALMA'S MIRROR REFLECTED AN ALLURING CREATURE.

I saw some one particularly interesting. You must find out who he is, Mort."

Morton Ellis was one whose scalp lock hung on Alma's jeweled belt, but the fact had long since ceased to pain him.

"Still at your old tricks, Alma! How was the fellow dressed?"

"Oh, Morton, don't ask me about his clothes! His hair was curly, just like the color of Fanchette's hair. And his eyes—deep blue and abstracted looking. He wouldn't have seen me if—"

"You hadn't dropped your handkerchief!" surmised Morton.

"The wind—there really was a wind—twisted my scarf around his feet, and he restored it to me. You must find out for me, Mort."

"Any distinctive feature?" questioned her cousin.

Alma wrinkled her forehead. "No—but, Mort, he had a satchel with a tiny wood handled something."

"Geologist's hammer," hazarded Ellis. "A college man, lassie!"

Next afternoon Morton announced that Alma's scarf rescuer was Leslie Reading, professor of geology, enthusiastic to a degree over his work, and a frequenter of the Warden road.

"Oh, Mort," Alma greeted him that evening, "I came upon Professor Reading on the Warden road! He explained so many things I've always wanted to know about rocks, and Mort, he's coming to my reception next week!"

Reading had always held an old fashioned idea that love was something to be spoken of only after lengthy acquaintance, nor did his idea, much to Alma's irritation, change after he met her.

Determined before the summer vacation to make his tongue tell what his eyes had already eloquently told, Alma began to treat him with an uncertain tenderness that convinced him that she loved him.

"I never dreamed that you would ask me to marry you," she lightly told him when, at the great June reception at the Laurens house, he spoke in reverent humility.

"How could you think I cared for you?"

asked when he at length understood "You made me think of it!"

Alma's mirror after the reception that evening reflected an alluring creature in her splendid yellow satin gown, but she had not been sufficiently affected by the glamour of her beauty to beseech her to change her mind. Vexed and disappointed, she had sent away the gown she had worn.

It was October again. The western college town had never had a concert to equal the one now in progress.

"Isn't she beautiful?" The instructor who had thrown up a professorship in an eastern city for this humble place heard this breathed as he sat listening with downcast eyes.

"Do look, Professor Reading! Oh, that gown! Oh!"

Leslie looked up. There behind the footlights stood a girl with masses of red brown hair waved simply back from her face. The gown she wore with charming grace might have been Alma Laurens' June reception gown, thought Reading. And was it not?

Madeline Coyle did not like the staring to which she was subjected, but there was something in the evidently unconscious gaze of a pair of solemn blue eyes that followed her during the next day at the hotel that made her heart beat quicker.

Long acquaintance is not necessary to love. Madeline knew this very soon and she began to find it hard to sing before the serious listener in the front row each evening. It was a series of concerts that was being sung in the college town.

And Reading knew before the week's end that the heart he had believed dead was alive and in the keeping of the young singer who wore Alma Laurens' dress.

On Saturday he came upon Madeline walking on the river bank.

"I want to speak to you, Miss Coyle," he said hastily. "Will you listen a moment?"

"Professor who stares, what have you to say?" she asked, in attempted lightness.

Reading flushed painfully. "Did I stare? It is small wonder when you—when you wear the very costume another woman wore when she trampled on my heart—a woman who, for the fun of making me propose marriage, made me believe she loved me. I—I—may I ask?"

"I had no means to buy a new costume," the girl said simply, "so I purchased it from a clothing bureau."

"I did not know there was a woman in the world so beautiful," said Reading after a moment. "Madeline, what would you say if a stranger told you he loved you?"

Madeline looked at him, then laid her slim hand on his trembling one. "I would say," she half whispered, "Oh, Leslie, how happy I am!"

"Blessed yellow dress!" murmured Reading when they had strolled back to the town at sunset. "You'll wear it at our wedding, won't you, my sweet?"

The young singer smiled. "A bride must wear white," she said softly. "but I will put it on at evening when you come home to dinner. Will that satisfy you, dear?"

And Reading made eloquent answer.

A Case of Luck.

"Guess I was born lucky, all right," remarked a man with a low comedy face at a downtown lunch counter.

"Listen to this:

"Yesterday morning on leaving home I encountered a friend at my newsdealer's. He handed me a paper. At the subway station he produced two tickets, and we rode together. About 12:30 my brother-in-law phoned me an invitation to join him at luncheon, which I did. He was engaged to dine at my house in the evening. He called for me at the office and insisted on paying the fares uptown. When I got home I suddenly realized that, quite inadvertently, I hadn't spent a cent all day."

"Don't see anything very lucky about that," a listener interrupted.

"Didn't say there was," continued the speaker. "But I discovered at the same time that I had left home in the morning without one cent in my pocket."

"Guess you are lucky, all right," said the other.—New York Mail.

Made His Heart Glad.

"Twas night, and the editor lay in bed and thought of the weary day he had just passed, of his aching head and the bills he had to pay.

He watched the stars through his window peep and Cynthia's silver beams till his eyes grew tired and he fell asleep and passed to the land of dreams.

He slept and dreamed till the morning broke and the day began its race, and the wife who lay by his side awoke and gazed on his placid face.

She looked and saw on his face a light like the sun's first golden ray that softly kisses the mountain's height as the darkness flies away.

Then she nudged his arm, for 'twas time to rise, as the clock was striking 7, and asked as he rubbed his sleepy eyes, "Did you dream you were in heaven?"

"Oh! not quite that, my love," said he, "but it made my heart so glad; I dreamed that a man came in to me and paid in advance for a full page ad."—Exchange.

London's New Joke.

London is holding its sides because of a wonderful new joke. It's rather a shame to tell it to you, but it's too good to keep. The first Englishman asked the second, "Why is Melba like a Dutch oyster?" Get ready, now, it's coming. "Because she is an Australia." Isn't that the acme of wit? An "oyster alien." And people dare to say the English are not humorous.—Springfield Republican.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside" nerves fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

For days at a time, following each big storm, the streets of Berlin were blocked to such an extent that the street department of the German capital was taxed to the limit. DANCY.

John F. Mathie of Wausau transacted business in this village a day recently. Work is progressing well in the Dancy drainage district. All three boats are now working full time.

J. J. Heffron of Stevens Point, with a party of men, passed through this village Saturday in Mr. Heffron's touring car.

Miss Gladys Altenberg took part in a piano recital given by the pupils of Mrs. Clinton Smith, in Wausau, last Saturday.

A. M. Nelson of Stevens Point and W. B. Coddington of Plover were in this village the past week on real estate business.

Albert Borth's fine new blacksmith shop, which he is erecting in Dancy, is nearing completion. When Albert undertakes anything, it has to go some.

The potato market kept around 30 cents for white stock the past week. At this price not many are being marketed, as farmers are holding for a better figure.

Henry Bloompot spent the past week at his home in Pekin, Ill., going down to see his mother and brothers prior to their leaving for San Antonio, Texas, where they will spend the winter.

E. L. Fisher is putting a 24 foot addition on his boarding house so as to be better prepared to take care of the traveling public. Mr. Fisher has had a great many boarders all summer.

Roger Guenther and wife of Knowlton are the proud parents of a little daughter, who put in her appearance last Monday. Congratulations are in order for Roger and his estimable wife.

Our fine new school house is nearing completion. The plasterers are now at work, but by the time the heating plant is installed, painting completed, etc., it is not expected to be ready for occupancy much before the holidays.

Mrs. G. G. Knoller and son George returned home from Chicago the past week, in which city they spent a few days visiting various places of interest. They also spent a day in Milwaukee with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Forrester.

A first-class entertainment will be given by home talent under the direction of Arleigh Peabody, at Peit's hall, Knowlton, for the benefit of St. Francis Catholic church, on Tuesday evening, the 19th. Everybody invited to attend and help a very worthy cause along.

The dancing party which was given in E. E. Topham's hall a few evenings ago, was a great success. There was a large crowd in attendance, many coming from the surrounding towns. The music furnished by the Big Four of Grand Rapids is said to have been of the highest order.

Quite a number of real estate transfers are reported within the past few days. C. Bauch and H. Teeting traded their places about four miles west of here for farms near Elkhorn, Wis., and John Huiting traded his farm about a mile from Dancy for a farm about two miles from Mosinee. The considerations are all reported big but being for trade we cannot tell the actual cash values.

Peter Peterson, the 17 year old son of O. Peterson and wife, very respected residents of this locality, died last Wednesday morning after only a few days' illness with typhoid fever. The deceased was born in Stevens Point, April 10, 1892. He was a young man of much promise, bright, industrious and obedient to his parents, and had all the traits that go to make a man. His death at this time is a severe blow to the family. Besides his parents he leaves a younger brother and sister to mourn his loss. The funeral was held from the Norwegian Lutheran church Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. O. T. Boe of Wausau officiated. In his sermon he referred to the excellent character of the deceased as he knew him, and spoke many words of consolation to the afflicted parents.

Two hold-ups in one day is something unusual in this hitherto peaceful community, but that is what took place near this place and Knowlton last Sunday. Two parties supposed to be Russian-Polanders, who had been employed on the extension of the St. Paul road to U. S. Leather Co. timber east of Knowlton, held up one of the other employees, severely pommeling him and relieved him of $20 in currency. They then came on to Dancy where they spent an hour or so apparently taking it easy. Upon leaving here they started down the railroad track towards Junction City. Just a short distance below Dancy, at the trestle that crosses the Little Eau Pleine, they met John Lundgren, whom they dealt with the same as the Knowlton party, afterwards proceeding on their journey via the railroad towards Junction City. Mr. Lundgren ran to Dancy and gave the alarm and a party was organized at once, who started in pursuit with a hand car. They overtook their men about three miles below Dancy, who upon hearing them coming, took to the woods, and as it was already dusk nothing could be done at that time. Fred Culver, deputy sheriff of Portage county, was notified to be on the look-out at the Junction. Monday morning when the section crew from that place went out to work they saw two parties about a mile from town who looked suspicious. Part of the crew returned and notified Mr. Culver, who went out and brought them in. The parties whom they held up at Dancy and Knowlton identified them as their assailants. Sheriff Sell of Wausau went down to Junction City and took them into custody, and it is hoped they will be severely dealt with.

KNOWLTON.

Born, Monday, Oct. 11, 1909, a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Roger Guenther.

A hold-up of quite an extreme nature took place here Sunday afternoon. Three men employed on the railroad extension line came to the A. Feit saloon, one of them getting a check cashed to the amount of $22.50. They stayed some time and then started back to camp. After going as far as the railroad crossing, about two miles on their way out, two of the men set upon the one who had received money from his check and beat him into unconsciousness, then pilfered his pockets, obtaining the $22.50 and his watch. They left their victim and turned back to the Feit saloon, where they remained a short time. Later in the day word was received that a hold-up had also taken place near Dancy, two fellows who had been at the V. Brooks saloon being suspected. They met a man near the tressel, one mile and a half down the track from the village, attacked him and secured $2.50. They then hurried on down the track, their victim being able, notwithstanding his beating, to proceed on his way and hurriedly told his adventure. Everyone about became interested and the news rapidly spread by telephone and hand-car service. The robbers were followed down the track and then lost sight of. Deputy Sheriff F. E. Culver of Junction City was on the alert, ready to arrest any suspicious characters. Monday morning he had the two in custody and after he had the two in custody their victims from Dancy and Knowlton and A. Feit, P. Hibbard and S. Switkowski went down on the noon train and identified them as the right fellows. Sheriff Sell of Wausau took them to safe quarters on the way freight Monday afternoon, where we hope justice of the right order will be meted out to them.

STAMP OUT THE PLAGUE

Sale of Wisconsin Christmas Stamps
Opens Nov. 30 and Everybody Should Help.

The second annual Christmas stamp campaign of the Wisconsin Anti-tuberculosis Association, to raise funds to continue the fight against the white plague by the sale of neat holiday greeting stickers, will open November 30. The association has determined to sell $8,000,000 of these stamps by midnight, December 31.

This year an exclusively "Wisconsin stamp" will be sold. The price will again be one cent. The stamps take the place of holiday greeting stickers now generally used on Christmas packages and on letters, business and social, during the holiday season. Besides forming an excellent substitute for the conventional stickers, the Wisconsin Christmas stamp carries a message of hope in the fight against consumption, while the penny paid for it goes into a great and worthy work.

Every city, village and hamlet in Wisconsin will have a local headquarters and a campaign manager. There will be plenty of stamps for everyone and the price places them within reach of the poorest persons. A fine organization has been perfected by Stanley A. Douglas, whose experience in the first campaign last fall gives promise of an even more successful campaign this year. Church, school and state have joined the movement. Gov. Davidson, Archbishop Messmer, State Supt. of Schools Cary and hundreds of leading men endorse and participate in the campaign. The best citizenship of Wisconsin is enlisted.

The above cut shows the exact size of the stamp, but does not do justice to its beauty. It is a fine work of art in two colors—good enough to grace formal social letter or commercial circular: a gift package that cost 25 cents or one that cost $25. The stamps may be purchased anywhere in Wisconsin on and after Nov. 30.

NEW YORK'S CHINATOWN

IN BUSY MOTT STREET

ANOTHER civilization, gauged by other moral standards, restrained, or unrestrained, of other laws and codes, has for many years existed in New York under the eyes and noses of that city's people and their officials. In this sphere men and women have moved like the flotsam in an eddy, against the stream of the world without. The secret rules of the order provided the only known escape from the arm of the nation's law; they made men secure in the commission of atrocities and villed the existence of a set of moral conditions almost beyond comprehension; certainly past momentary tolerance.

Over the whole was a hectic filament of romance and morbid interest which appeared to the chance passer or the sightseer to make the place a curiously fascinating corner transplanted from another world—far too original and alluring to be removed. They called it Chinatown. It is, in place; it is no street in particular, though it has its center and its boundaries. It is rather a degenerate state of the senses.

New Yorkers know of it, of course, in a dim sort of way. Now and then there was a brawl, a killing of some Oriental or an opium den raid. These were matters of course. No one gave them more than passing attention.

To-day, however, New York knows Chinatown in its true perspective. The Elsie Sigel murder was the first rift in the cloud that obscured the fact. Now the mist itself is dissipated. New York knows that Chinatown—the spirit, not the place—is one of its cruel, almost unthinkable problems. The latest outrage in Chinatown—a place that brews outrages faster than a quagmire hatches mosquitoes—is the abduction of a pretty mill girl of Weehawken and her imprisonment in a Chinese den, where she was subjected to horrifying cruelties.

This most recent unfortunate is Christina Braun, 15 years old, blue-eyed and inclined to be just a little "wild." Christina's case differs from that of hundreds of other girls who have fallen victim to the lures of Chinatown only in the fact that she had the good fortune to escape before she became a slave to opium—the supreme evil of this most vicious hole in all the vast metropolis.

The girl went to Coney Island with some friends on a Sunday. She lost her companions in the crowd and, finally, after wandering about for a time, went into a chop suey "joint" to get a bite to eat. There she was drugged, and the next thing she remembers she was being carried through the labyrinthine hallway to a Chinatown den.

The girl fought desperately to get away from two Chinese who were dragging her along the floor of the dark hall, but she was beaten into insensibility. When she next recovered consciousness she was in a dimly lighted room and a hideous Chinaman was leaning over her, leering into her face.

Again the girl screamed and fought to get out of the place, but was knocked senseless. Between beatings she was made to understand that she was the slave of her captor and that the best thing she could do would be to remain quiet. But devious, dark and dirty as Chinatown is, news will travel there, and the girl had not been in the den more than 24 hours before a "lobbygow"—a Chinaman who acts as stool pigeon and informer for the police—told two Mulberry street detectives that there was a white girl prisoner somewhere in the colony.

The men set watch and, after a time, succeeded in starving out and capturing Joe Wong, an Americanized Chinese gambler. The girl was found in Wong's room, her face so bruised that her friends had difficulty in recognizing her when they visited her at the headquarters of the Gerry society. Wong was locked up in the Tombs, but he probably will get out of the scrape on the ground that the girl willingly accompanied him to his lair.

A regularly organized traffic in white and Chinese girl slaves exists in Chinatown and every detective who has worked in that section knows it now.

It is true that scores of women fall prey to the Chinese every year by first visiting Chinatown on slumming and sight-seeing trips. Others are attracted there by the gaudy tales about how kind and gentle the Chinese are to women; how well they clothe them and how liberal they are with money. These tales also are nearly all fakes. Anyone who has ever seen a real "hop joint" in Chinatown will never forget the dirt and degradation of it. Some of the wealthier Chinese have apartments that are fitted up in flashy oriental style, and a few of the gambling houses are well furnished. Three or four of the restaurants—mainly patronized by sight-seers—are gaudy in the extreme, but back behind all this, in the kitchens, the living quarters and up under the roofs of the tottering old buildings, exist squalor and misery such as can scarce be found elsewhere on this continent.

The pitiful story of Moy You and Neou Fung, two little Chinese girls, is enough to set the hand of all the world against the slave traders of Chinatown.

These girls were sold—it is believed by the police—to Chinese slave traders in China and smuggled into this country. They fell into the clutches of a Chinese merchant of some means in Chinatown and their tale of the cruelties to which they were subjected was brought to the attention of the Chinese charge d'affaires in Washington. The girls are in the hands of the Gerry society. They declare that they were compelled to work 20 hours a day at cooking, cleaning, scrubbing and covering button molds and that they were beaten almost every day.

Reading of these outrages the average American wonders why the perpetrators are not sent to prison, but it must be remembered that there are no men more wily and skillful in concocting false evidence than dishonest Americanized Chinese. It is next to impossible to obtain evidence against the slave traders of Chinatown that will stand in a court of justice. To begin with any Chinese witness who dares testify against one of his countrymen in New York takes his life in his hand. The boldness of the Chinatown slave trader is almost beyond belief.

Capt. Galvin of the police department, who is in charge of the precinct embracing Chinatown, has worked hard to "clean up" the place and drive the white women out of it, but his efforts have been of little avail. He has come to the conclusion that the "town" needs "cleaning out" instead of "cleaning up," and has recommended this action to Commissioner Baker. If Galvin had his way he would keep slumming and sight-seeing parties out of Chinatown. The "rubber-neck" wagon often is the net that drags the innocents to the dens.

Termination of His Connection with Service—Discussion of Eastern
Treaties Regarded as Indiscreet.

Washington.—It was known in well informed quarters in Washington Sunday that unless Charles R. Crane, whose sudden, unexpected and hitherto mysterious recall to Washington by Secretary of State Knox, is able to clear himself in the eyes of the secretary of an accusation of a serious breach of what the state department regards as the first principle of diplomatic discretion, the conference with his official chief may result in the quick termination of Mr. Crane's connection with the diplomatic service. Mr. Crane was on the point of sailing from San Francisco to assume his duties as minister to China when he received his recall to Washington.

When Minister Crane arrived in Washington Sunday from his hurried journey across the continent he reiterated his declaration of ignorance as to the occasion for his rather dramatic recall from the water's edge of the Pacific and declined to discuss the matter in any of its aspects, beyond saying that, while he expected to be here several days, he had reserved new accommodations for the trans-Pacific voyage on the steamer sailing from San Francisco on October 20.

The state department has in hand, it is said, what it regards as more or less convincing evidence that Minister Crane, on the eve of his departure for the far east, became responsible for the publication in a Chicago newspaper of what the department views as a most indiscreet discussion of the attitude of the United States toward the two treaties recently negotiated between China and Japan. This the department holds to have been the more serious because that attitude is still under confidential consideration, no decision having been arrived at.

While the speeches delivered by Mr. Crane before the American Asiatic association, and at a dinner given in his honor at Chicago, are viewed at the state department as having been at best unwise and undiplomatic, they had been carefully considered after their delivery and before Mr. Crane started for San Francisco, and, although deprecated, were not regarded as justifying any change in his plans.

DETROIT TURNS TABLES.

Defeats Pittsburg in Second Championship Game by Score of 7 to 2.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Detroit evened up the count in the world's championship series, Saturday, defeating Pittsburg, 7 to 2, in a one-sided game at Forbes field. The Detroit players batted Camnitz hard in the early innings until Willis was substituted for Camnitz in the third inning, and Detroit scored two more runs off him. The first inning was all Pittsburg, but after that the National league champions were never in the running for a moment. Two two-baggers and a base on balls off "Wild Bill" Donovan in the first inning was the end of their ability to hit him. After this he became better every inning and the hard-hitting Pittsburg men were absolutely helpless before his brilliant twirling. Only three hits were made off Donovan after the first inning. One of the sensational features was a brilliant steal of home by Ty Cobb in the third inning on the first ball pitched by Willis. Gibson was so surprised at the unexpected feat of Cobb that he dropped the ball as Cobb slid under the plate. Score by innings:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.	H.	P.

Batteries.—Camnitz, Willis and Gibson; Donovan and Schmidt.

Taft at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Refreshed by his three days' stay in the beautiful Yosemite, President Taft arrived in Los Angeles at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning. He was looking especially well, and his greeting to the members of the Chamber of Commerce committee that met him at the station was jovial. The president was taken at once to the residence of his sister, Mrs. William A. Edwards, 2600 West Adams street, where he had breakfast and rested for two hours. Then the committee reappeared and took him to San Pedro, the great new harbor recently annexed to the city. There Mr. Taft inspected the government breakwater, the outer and inner harbors and the proposed sites for fortifications determined on by the war department.

STATE NEWS

Milwaukee.—Albert Scheak, about 40 years old, shot twice and seriously wounded Mrs. Frances Beeckler, aged 23 years, wife of George W. Beeckler, a saloonkeeper, and then sent a fatal bullet into his brain while the two were in Cottage Grove, a mile and a half southwest of the city limits on the Janesville plank road, the saloon conducted by the woman's husband.

Green Bay.—A convention of a priest's league for the benefit of Poland and Belgium immigrants met in this city. Fifty-two priests were present from all over the United States. The priests assisted in the dedication of the new St. Willebrod's school at which Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee was present.

Madison.—Rev. J. M. Naughton, for 14 years pastor of St. Raphael's Catholic church, will exchange pastorates with Rev. Thomas Johnson of Racine. Father Naughton came to Madison from St. Mathew's church, Milwaukee, and prior to his St. Mathew's pastorate, he was at St. John's cathedral, Milwaukee.

Grand Rapids.—Judge Webb at Wautoma sentenced the two men brought back from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., where they had just served four years for robbing the Wild Rose bank. They pleaded guilty and Judge Webb sentenced them to the state prison for a term of one year.

Stoughton.—At the request of the Promoters' club, the council consented to erect three electric arches to span Main street. On the west and east arches will be the word "Welcome," and on the center one the phrase, "Watch Stoughton Grow." This is the first departure of this kind here.

Appleton.—At the session of the state convention of the Wisconsin Congregational association, the recommendation of the election of Dr. W. D. Eaton, president of Beloit college, as moderator for the ensuing year was withdrawn and W. R. Nethercut of Wauwatosa was elected.

Sheboygan.—Plans for the new German Reformed church at New Holstein have just been completed. The new church will cost about $7,000, it is estimated. Although of irregular shape, it will be about 40x50 feet in size. It will have a tower in the front angle.

Racine.—The unknown man who fell on the railway tracks and died after being taken to St. Mary's hospital, was identified as Anthony Babyionis of Waukegan, Ill. The man had been a bar tender in that city and came to Racine in search of employment.

Superior.—A general meeting of the Commercial club has been called to discuss the adoption of a commission system of government in Superior. There has been but little agitation on the subject and the result of the meeting is hard to predict.

Ladysmith.—The body of Ernest French, who had been missing from his home near Conrath, was found within a mile of his home. There is a bullet hole through the body. He was the son of a pioneer hunter and trapper.

Lake Geneva.—Charles W. Taylor, Charles B. Auld and Jesse P. Shannon have been appointed letter carriers here. A civil service examination will be held in Ashland on November 13 for postmaster at Ashland Junction.

Green Bay.—The dedication of St. Willebrod's parochial school took place. Following the dedication a pontifical high mass was said, during which there was a sermon in both the English and Holland languages.

Superior.—The levy for city expenses during the coming year will be $261,000 and for school expenses $152,000. The total will be $415,000. According to the city controller the tax rate will be 27 1/4 mills.

Wausau.—So few country treasurers were here that the convention was postponed and those here were given auto rides around the city. Only the organization and election of officers will be attempted here.

Superior.—A move has been started by the recently organized Business Men's association for working out a system upon which the development and improvement of Douglas county's roads shall be based.

Viroqua.—A $100,000 tobacco pool, said to control $750,000 worth of 1908 tobacco, has been formed by the American Society of Equity at Viroqua, the center of the Wisconsin tobacco growing country.

Sheboygan.—The police have started a crusade against saloonkeepers selling liquor to minors. Warrants have been sworn out against several.

Wausau.—John Rebarczyk, 40, was drowned in the Wisconsin river while going to work in the Mortenson mill. He probably fell in accidentally.

Fond du Lac.—Mrs. Betsey Brown, colored, died at the age of 109 years. Up to two weeks ago she had never been ill, according to her own story.

Green Bay.—The post office will be moved into the new federal building. An open inspection day is scheduled.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrop, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the others. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrop was his last match on a cigarette, for which he was gored by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish. The trio started a ten mile hike for higher land. Thirst attacked them. Blake was compelled to carry Miss Leslie on account of weariness. He taunted Winthrop. They entered the jungle. That night was passed roosting high in a tree. The next morning they descended to the open again. All three constructed huts to shield themselves from the sun. They then feasted on coconuts, the only procurable food. Miss Leslie showed a liking for Blake, but detested his roughness. Led by Blake, Blake found a fresh water spring. Miss Leslie faced an unpleasant situation. They planned their campaign. Blake covered his surveyor's mangroving glass, thus insuring fire. He started a jungle fire, killing a large leopard and smothering several cubs. In the leopard's cavern they built a small home. They gained the cliffs by burning the bottom of a tree until it fell against the heights. The trio secured eggs from the cliffs. Miss Leslie's white skirt was decided upon as a signal.

One after another, the keys were welded together, end to end, in a narrow ribbon of steel. The thinnest one, however, was not fastened to the tip until it had been used to burn a groove in the edge of a rib, selected from among the bones which Miss Leslie had thrown out of the baobab. The last key was then fastened to the others; the blade ground sharp, tempered, and inserted in the groove. Finally, pieces of the keying were fitted in bands around the bone, through notches cut in the ends of the steel blade. The result was a bone-handled, bone-backed knife, with a narrow cutting edge of fine steel.

Long before it was finished Miss Leslie had been forced away by the requirements of her own work. In fact, Blake did not complete his task until late in the afternoon. At the end, he spent more than an hour grinding the handle into shape. When he came to show the completed knife to Miss Leslie, he was fairly aglow with justifiable pride.

"How's that for an Eskimo job?" he demanded. "Bunch of keys and a bone, eh?"

"You are certainly very ingenious, Mr. Blake!"

"Nixy! There's little of the inventor in my top piece—only some hustle and a good memory. I was up in Alaska, you know. Saw a sight of Eskimo work."

"Still, it is very skillfully done."

"That may be— Look out for the edge! It'd do to shave. No more bamboo splinters for me—dull when you hit a piece of bone. I'm ready now to skin a rhinoceros."

"If you can catch one!"

"Guess we could find enough of them around here, all right. But we'll start in on some of Win's sheep and cattle."

"Oh, do! One grows tired of eggs, and all these sea-birds are so tough and fishy, no matter how I cook them."

"We'll sneak down to the pool, and make a try with the bows this evening. I'll give odds, though, that we draw a blank. Win's got the aim, but no drive; I've got the drive, but no aim. Even if I hit an antelope, I don't think a bamboo-pointed arrow would bother him much."

"Don't the savages kill game with out iron weapons?"

"Sure; but a lot have flint points, and a lot of others use poison. I know that the Apaches and some of those other southern Indians used to fix their arrows with rattlesnake poison."

"How horrible!"

"Well, that depends on how you look at it. I guess they thought guns more horrible when they tackled the whites and got the daylight let through 'em. At any rate, they swapped arrows for rifles mighty quick, and anyone who knows Apaches will tell you it wasn't because they thought bullets would do less damage."

"Yet the thought of poison—"

"Yes; but the thought of self-preservation! Sooner than starve, I'd poison every animal in Africa—and so would you."

"I—I— You put it in such a horrible way. One must consider others, animals as well as people; and yet—"

"Survival of the fittest. I've read some things, and I'm no fool, if I do say it myself. For instance, I'm the boss here, because I'm the fittest of our crowd in this environment; but back in what's called civilized parts, where the law lets a few shrewd fellows monopolize the means of production, a man like your father—"

"Mr. Blake, it is not my fault if papa's position in the business world—"

"Ner his, either—it's the cursed system! No; that's all right, Miss Jenny. I was only illustrating. Now, I take it, both you and Win would like to get rid of a boss like me, if you could get rid of Africa at the same time. As it is, though, I guess you'd rather have me for boss, and live, than be left all by your lonesomes, to starve."

"I—I— I'm sure there is no question of your leadership, Mr. Blake. We have both tried our best to do what you have asked of us."

"You have, at least. But I know. If a ship should come to-morrow, it'd be Blake to the back seat. 'Papa, give this—er—person a check for his services, while I chase off with Winnie, to get my look-in on 'Is Ri-yal 'Ighness.'"

Miss Leslie flushed crimson—"I'm sure, Mr. Blake—"

"Oh, don't let that worry you, Miss Jenny. I don't me. I couldn't be sore with you if I tried. Just the same, I know what it'll be like. I've rubbed elbows enough with snobs and big bugs to know what kind of consideration they give one of the mahasses—unless one of the mahasses has the drop on them. Hello, Win! What's kept you so late?"

"None of your business!" snapped Winthrop.

Miss Leslie glanced at him, even more puzzled and startled by this outbreak than she had been by Blake's strange talk. But if Blake was angered, he did not show it.

"Say, Win," he remarked gravely, "I was going to take you down to the pool after supper, on a try with the bows. But I guess you'd better stay close by the fire."

"Yes; it is time you gave a little consideration to those who deserve it," rejoined Winthrop, with a peevishness of tone and manner which surprised Miss Leslie. "I tell you, I'm tired of being treated like a dog."

"All right, all right, old man. Just draw up your chair, and get all the hot broth aboard you can stow," answered Blake, soothingly.

Winthrop sat down; but throughout the meal, he continued to complain over trifles with the peevishness of a spoiled child, until Miss Leslie blushed for him. Greatly to her astonishment, Blake endured the nagging without a sign of irritation, and in the end took his bow and arrows and went off down the cleft, with no more than a quiet reminder to Winthrop that he should keep near the fire.

When, shortly after dark, the engineer came groping his way back up the gorge, he was by no means so calm. Out of six shots, he had hit one antelope in the neck and another in the haunch; yet both animals had made off all the swifter for their wounds.

The noise of his approach awakened Winthrop, who turned over, and began to complain in a whining falsetto. Miss Leslie, who was peering out through the bars of her screen, looked to see Blake kick the prostrate man. His frown showed only too clearly that he was in a savage temper. To her astonishment, he spoke in a soothing tone until Winthrop again fell asleep.

Then he quietly set about erecting a canopy of bamboos over the sleeper.

Just why he should build this was a puzzle to the girl. But when she caught a glimpse of Blake's altered expression, she drew a deep breath of relief, and picked her way around the edge of her bamboo stakes, to lie down without a trace of the fear which had been haunting her.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Mark of the Beast.

MORNING found Winthrop more irritable and peevish than ever. Though he had not been called on watch by Blake until long after midnight, he had soon fallen asleep at his post and permitted the fire to die out. Shortly before dawn, Blake was roused by a pack of jackals, snarling and quarreling over the half-dried seaweed. To charge upon the thieves and put them to flight with a few blows of his club took but a moment. Yet daylight showed more than half the drying frames empty.

Blake was staring glumly at them, with his broad back to Winthrop, when Miss Leslie appeared. The sudden cessation of Winthrop's complaints brought his companion around on the instant. The girl stood before him, clad from neck to foot in her leopard-skin dress.

"Well, I'll be—dashed!" he exclaimed, and he stood staring at her open-mouthed.

"I fear it will be warm. Do you think it becoming?" she asked, flushing, and turning as though to show the fit of the costume.

"Do I?" he echoed. "Miss Jenny, you're a peach!"

"Thank you," she said. "And here is the skirt. I have ripped it open. You see, it will make a fine flag."

"If it's put up. Seems a pity, though, to do that, when we're getting on so fine. What do you say to leaving it down, and starting a little colony of our own?"

Miss Leslie raised the skirt in her outstretched hands. Behind it her face became white as the cloth.

"Well?" demanded Blake soberly, though his eyes were twinkling.

"You forget the fever," she retorted mockingly, and Blake failed to catch the quaver beneath the light remark.

"Say, you've got me there!" he admitted. "Just pass over your flag, and scrape up some grub. I'll be breaking out a big bamboo. There are plenty of holes and loose stones on the cliff. We'll have the signal up before noon."

Miss Leslie murmured her thanks, and immediately set about the preparation of breakfast.

When Blake had the bamboo ready, with one edge of the broad piece of white duck lashed to it with catgut as high up as the tapering staff would bear, he called upon Winthrop to accompany him.

"You can go, too, Miss Jenny," he added. "You haven't been on the cliff yet, and you ought to celebrate the occasion."

"No, thank you," replied the girl. "I'm still unprepared to climb precipices, even though my costume is that of a savage."

pieces, even though my costume is that of a savage."

"Savage? Great Scott! that leopard dress would win out against any set of Russian furs a-going, and I've heard they're considered all kinds of dog. Come on. I can swing you into the branches, and it's easy from there up."

"You will excuse me, please."

"Yes, you can go alone," interposed Winthrop. "I am indisposed this morning, and, what is more, I have had enough of your dictation."

"You have, have you?" growled Blake, his patience suddenly come to an end. "Well, let me tell you, Miss Leslie is a lady, and if she don't want to go, that settles it. But as for you, you'll go, if I have to kick you every step."

Winthrop cringed back, and broke into a childish whine. "Don't—don't do it, Blake— Oh, I say, Miss Genevieve, how can you stand by and see him abuse me like this?"

Blake was grinning as he turned to Miss Leslie. Her face was flushed and downcast with humiliation for her friend. It seemed incredible that a man of his breeding should betray such weakness. A quick change came over Blake's face.

"Look here," he muttered. "I guess I'm enough of a sport to know something about fair play. Win's coming down with the fever, and's no more to blame for doing the baby act than he'll be when he gets the delirium, and gabbles."

"I will thank you to attend to your own affairs," said Winthrop.

"You're entirely welcome. It's what I'm doing— Do you understand, Miss Jenny?"

"Indeed, yes; and I wish to thank you. I have noticed how patient you have been—"

"Pardon me, Miss Leslie," rasped Winthrop. "Can you not see that for a fellow of this class to talk of fair play and patience is the height of impertinence? In England, now, such insufferable impudence—"

"That'll do," broke in Blake. "It's time for us to trot along."

"But, Mr. Blake, if he is ill—"

"Just the reason why he should keep moving. No more of your gab, Win! Give your jaw a lay-off, and try wiggling your legs instead."

Winthrop turned away, crimson with indignation. Blake paused only for a parting word with Miss Leslie. "If you want something to do, Miss Jenny, try making yourself a pair of moccasins out of the scraps of skin. You can't stay in this gully all the time. You've got to tramp around some, and those slippers must be about done for."

"They are still serviceable. Yet if you think—"

"You'll need good tough moccasins soon enough. Singe off the hair, and make soles of the thicker pieces. If you do a fair job, maybe I'll employ you as my cobbler, soon as I get the hide off one of those skittish antelope."

Miss Leslie nodded and smiled in response to his jesting tone. But as he swung away after Winthrop, she stood for some time wondering at herself. A few days since she knew she would have taken Blake's remark as an insult. Now she was puzzled to find herself rather pleased that he should so note her ability to be of service.

When she roused herself, and began singeing the hair from the odds and ends of leopard skin, she discovered a new sensation to add to her list of unpleasant experiences. But she did not pause until the last patch of hair crisped close to the half-cured surface of the hide. Fetching the penknife and her thorn and catgut from the baobab, she gathered the pieces of skin together, and walked along the cleft to the ladder-tree. There had been time enough for Blake and Winthrop to set up the signal, and she was curious to see how it looked.

She paused at the foot of the tree, and gazed up to where the withered crown lay crushed against the edge of the cliff. The height of the rocky wall made her hesitate; yet the men, in passing up and down, had so cleared away the twigs and leaves and broken the branches on the upper side of the trunk, that it offered a means of ascent far from difficult even for a young lady.

A Harder Job.

The tributes to the popularity of Mr. Hammond's son pleased the father, who was the oldest summer resident of Shrubville. They pleased him the more because they came from natives of the soil, whose good opinion could not be forced in any way.

"He's a real good boy, that boy o' yours," said Capt. Hollis Towne, and Capt. Lothrop James added his word of approval.

"I like the cut of his jib," he announced, with decision, "and I like his ways; he ain't too forth-putting, nor yet he ain't too stand-offish."

"Thing of it is you and his ma haven't tried to have him 'brought up,' same as most of the summer folks do with their children; he's just been 'raised' like we were, and that's why he gets on with everybody in this town, sir!"—Youth's Companion.

ONE-POLE HAY-STACKER PLAN

Care Should Be Exercised in Selecting the Timber to Avoid Getting One with Flaws.

The accompanying illustration shows how the one-pole form of hay-stacker is usually constructed. Some care should be used in selecting the upright pole in order to avoid one possessing a flaw or weak place. A good cedar telephone pole serves the purpose well. The arm should also be sound and free from flaws, and it is fastened to the main pole by means of plank cleats and a large bolt. The outer end is held in place by a guy rope fastened to the top of the upright pole. Three guy ropes are used to hold the stacker in position. These should be placed so as not to interfere with the arm when it swings from the load to the stack. The hay-fork should operate on a pulley, one end of the hay rope being attached to the other end of the arm. The other end of the hay rope passes over a pulley near the end of the arm from thence to one attached to the top of the upright pole, then downward to a pulley attached to the base of the upright pole, whereupon the singletree is attached. The pulleys over which the hay rope runs at the top and bottom of the upright pole are in line only when the arm of the stacker is above the stack. When above the load these pulleys are out of line. The strain put on the hay rope when pulling up a load tends to bring these pulleys back into line again, which swings the arm over the stack.

HOW TO KEEP RATS AWAY

Practical Method of Preventing Rodents from Getting Into Water by Concrete Curbing.

A very practical idea for preventing rats from working under well platforms and around the curbing, in which case they foul the water more or less, is to surround the curbing with concrete to a thickness of from four to six inches. This is done by digging down the side of the curbing with a tile spade and then filling in with concrete. A mixture of one part cement, three parts sand, and six parts broken tile or rock is very satisfactory for this purpose. The concrete should extend down the sides of the well at least three feet. It is also a good plan if the well is on level ground to extend the concrete six inches or a foot above the surface and then grade around the same. This will prevent surface water from entering the well.

Skim-Milk Paint.

The Scientific American, in commending skim milk for painting, gives the following directions for making it and some results from its use. It says:

"Stir into a gallon of milk about three pounds of Portland cement and add sufficient Venetian red paint powder to impart a good color. Any other colored paint powder may as well be used. The milk will hold the paint in suspension, but the cement, being heavy, will sink to the bottom, so that it becomes necessary to keep the mixture well stirred with a paddle. Mix only enough at a time for one day's use. Six hours after painting this paint will be as immovable and unaffected by water as a month-old paint. Cases are on record of this sort of paint being in good condition after 20 years and it has preserved the wood admirably. The addition of carbolic acid or some other disinfectant makes it very suitable for dairy work, as it then has a cleansing effect.

Practical Farming.

Hay should be well forked and shaken and slightly dampened and fed on the floor or in slatted mangers.

The farmer should not buy his work horses—he should raise them. He can grow them at a profit.

It is better for the average farmer to raise draft colts.

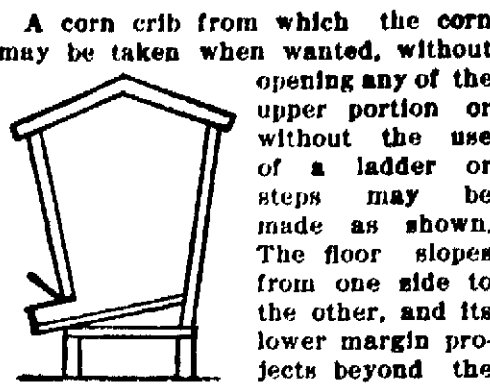

Only the man who is a born horse lover can raise roadsters profitably.

Colts like fine hay much better than they do coarse. Second-growth hay, fed a little at a time, is preferable.

Shredded corn fodder is relished, but should be fed in the same way—a little at a time. Grain should be fed liberally.

HANDY FEEDING CORN CRIB

Arranged So That Feed May Be Taken from It Without Opening Any of the Upper Portion.

A corn crib from which the corn may be taken when wanted, without opening any of the upper portion or without the use of a ladder or steps may be made as shown. The floor slopes from one side to the other, and its lower margin projects beyond the side of the crib sufficiently to permit the use of a box in which a scoop or shovel can be used, writes J. E. Bridgman in Missouri Valley Farmer. The projecting part of the floor is made the bottom of the box. A cover is hinged to the box so that it may be taken out, as shown by the dotted lines. To facilitate the use of the shovel, the opening into the crib is closed for a space of two feet, either in the middle or at each end. At these closed places these will be no corn upon the floor of the box, so it will be easy to shovel out the corn.

SET ASPARAGUS AND RHUBARB

In October and November is Best Time to Set Out These Hardy Plants.

All hardy plants that commence growth as soon as frost is out of the ground should be set out in the fall. The best time in the middle Atlantic states is from October 10 to November 20. If set out later than this period they should be covered with a little long stable manure or leaves to prevent injury from deep freezing. Rhubarb and asparagus plants, whether young or old, begin to develop buds which form the stalks just as soon as the weather turns mild in the spring. As soon as the buds develop there is a corresponding growth of rootlets. When the plants are set out in the fall the earth is settled about the plants and root and top growth starts early in spring, frequently as early as the last week in March. Fall-planted roots not only make an early growth, but they become so firmly established in their new home as to be better able to resist the dry, hot days of the following summer.

Hardy shrubs, deciduous trees, also apple, pear and plum trees, blackberry, raspberry and currant bushes should always be set out in the fall if it is possible to obtain the trees and bushes. If planted in spring they should be set out just as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the ground is dry enough to handle. This work should not be commenced until the leaves fall—that is, not before the tenth of October.

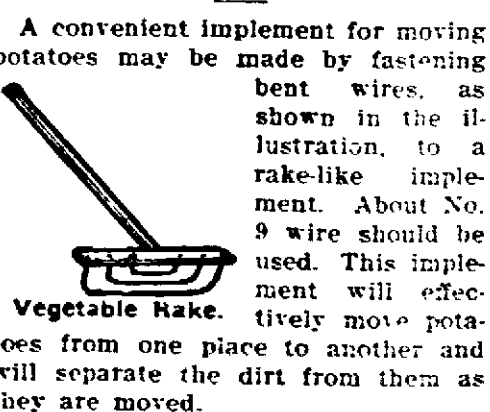

PROBLEM OF ARID FARMING

Securing of Moisture, Which Must First Be Gotten Into Soil and Kept There.

The great problem of arid farming is the securing of moisture, which must first be gotten into the soil and then kept there until the plants need it. The land should be plowed deeply in the fall to make an adequate reservoir for the storing of the winter moisture. The land should be fallowed during alternate years so that the moisture of two years will be available to the crop. The fallow land should be kept cultivated and free from weeds to prevent the evaporation of water from the surface. Deep-rooted crops should be selected so that they can reach far and wide for moisture.

USEFUL RAKE IN ROOT CROPS

Illustration Showing How to Make Implement for Moving and Sorting Potatoes—Costs Little.

Vegetable Rake.

A convenient implement for moving potatoes may be made by fastening bent wires, as shown in the illustration, to a rake-like implement. About No. 9 wire should be used. This implement will effectively move potatoes from one place to another and will separate the dirt from them as they are moved.

Late Celery.

It is about time to plant late celery and too much attention cannot be given in preparing the soil, says the Cultivator. Celery thrives best in soils abounding in vegetable matter, so that any kind of manure can be used freely for this crop. It should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil to a depth of at least eight inches. Many small growers still practice growing in trenches, but level culture is preferred for various reasons.

If the crop is to be blanched with soil there should be from four to five feet of space between rows. It is customary to space six to eight inches apart in the row, but five or six inches is sufficient if the ground is very rich.

Weeds in Unclean Seed.

Most of our worst weeds are introduced in unclean seed grain. It is more difficult to produce clean seed than it is unclean, and for that reason many seed growers are tempted to sell seed which contains many of the injurious weeds.

GOOD LAUNDRY BAG

PRETTY GIFT FOUND USEFUL WHEN TRAVELING.

Six Sheer Handkerchiefs, with Linen Insertion, the Materials That Composed It—To Clean Wall Paper.

An attractive bag to hold handkerchiefs, neckties and other small articles for the laundry, was made by a girl for a friend, who was going abroad on her wedding trip.

To make the bag dainty and at the same time serviceable was something of a problem. Six sheer handkerchiefs with a graceful vine, in light blue, as a border were picked up at a sale, also some fine linen insertion that washed well.

The six handkerchiefs were joined by strips of the insertion, one strip running lengthwise and two across. This put two handkerchiefs side by side in each of the three rows.

The strip was doubled over through the middle row of handkerchiefs and the outer edges overcast together in tiny stitches. The bag was lined with lawn and color of the blue vine and the ends were bound in an inch-wide facing of the lawn, which was used as a casing. A good quality of blue wash ribbon was used for a draw string.

In the center of the upper left hand handkerchief was worked the initials of the bride-to-be in a heavy padded monogram.

Cleaning Wall Paper.—To brighten wall paper that is stained and dirty apply a cleanser made of equal parts of cornstarch, whiting and Fuller's earth. Mix these ingredients well and put them into a pail. This cleanser is rubbed on the walls with a pad, made by covering the end of a mop handle with cheesecloth. This pad should be about six inches long and four inches wide, and must be soft.

Dip it in the powder and rub it on the paper, making the strokes only up and down. When the surface has been thoroughly rubbed, wipe with fresh cheesecloth.

Grease spots will frequently disappear before a combination of ammonia and Fuller's earth. Make a thin paste of the two and spread it over the stain. Let it remain until dry and brush off.

Baked Asparagus.

Wash two small bundles of asparagus until perfectly free from sand and stand them upright in a kettle of water, leaving the tender tips uncovered; in this way the steam will cook the tips while the boiling water is making the stocks tender, and the former will not be cooked to pieces, as is too frequently the case. When done drain and cut into small pieces, removing only the toughest portion of the ends. To each two cupfuls of asparagus add an equal amount of grated bread-crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and three or four dashes of pepper. Dust a well buttered mold lightly with the crumbs, then arrange the asparagus and crumbs in alternate layers, dusting each with salt and pepper and dotting with little bits of butter. Have the last layer of crumbs, pour over the milk and bake in a moderate oven 20 minutes. Serve hot. This dish is worth trying.

Bread Baking.

"After many years at bread baking," said a woman, "I found my bread long in rising in winter after working it on the bread board, which was usually cold. I bought a tin one, heated it before the fire and have never since chilled the bread. Instead of using a pan, which quickly chills, I bought a wide crock, always had it heated on the stove, placed my bread in it and covered with a piece of woolen blanket, with the result my bread was ready to bake much sooner than it was when this precaution was not taken."

A slate slab, such as is used for roofing, also makes an excellent bread board, and it is often procurable for nothing. It can be heated very hot and placed under a crock or pan of dough to assist slow bread rising on a very cold day.

Pressed Chicken.

Cut a small chicken into four parts, boil in as little water as possible without burning, and watch constantly. When done very tender take out the meat, but keep broth boiling. Pick the meat from the bones, chop it, and add butter, pepper and salt. Take all fat of broth, then pour over the chopped chicken. Then press it, put on top with something heavy to hold it down. Set on ice and when very cold slice it, and you have a delicious supper or breakfast dish.

Cream Sauce Hot.

Heat a pint of cream slowly in a double boiler; when nearly boiling set it off from the fire, put into it a half cupful of sugar, a little nutmeg or vanilla extract; stir it thoroughly and add when cool the whites of two eggs well beaten; set it on the fire in a dish containing hot water to keep hot until needed, stirring once or more.

Boiled Cider Pie.

Four tablespoonfuls of boiled cider, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of water, two tablespoonfuls of flour and one egg. Beat all together and bake in a deep plate with an upper and an under crust.

Cheap Fruit Cake.

Four eggs, two cups sugar, one cup molasses, one-half cup butter, one cup milk, one teaspoon soda, five cups flour, one cup of raisins, currants and spice to taste. Will make two round cakes. Frost top. Very nice.

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR.

Seemed Imminent—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and

New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

Origin of Word "Bible."

The word bible is derived from the Latin name biblia, which was treated as a singular although it comes from the Greek neuter plural, meaning "little books." This Greek diminutive was derived from byblus, or papyrus, the famous material on which ancient books were written. The title "Bible" was first used about the middle of the second Christian century in the so-called second epistle of Clement (xlv., 2).
